Senate Group Lists Names Of Race Data Customers

Maryland, Virginia Spots Included But None in District; Thousands Named

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Names of thousands of horse race information customers in 40 States are spread on the public record today for local law enforcement officials to see.

The list was made public by the Senate Commerce Committee in a wind-up document on its investigation into the Nation-wide horse race information business, an investigation that led to the jailing of Frank Erickson, the country's top bookie.

Maryland and Virginia spots were included in the list. None was listed for the District.

The Senators pointed out that there was no evidence that any specific name or address on the list (as of about May 1) was that of a bookie joint or bookmaker. But it added that "all, however, are the recipients of horse-racing news, either by wire ticker or telephone."

Map Shows Coverage

For a long time committee members have been promising they would produce the biggest list of American bookies in all history. They appear to have done so, although many race wire customers other than bookies are on the list. Bookmaking is illegal in all States but Nevada.

Along with the list, the committee published a map showing the Nation-wide race wire maintained by Continental Press Service. It has drops in 40 of the 48 States with only these exceptions: Florida, Texas, North Dakota, South Dakota, California, Utah, Vermont and Connecticut. State officials went to court to rip out the wire in Florida, Texas and California.

The list of bookie joints and others receiving the racing news was compiled from information furnished by Western Union, which leases the wires to Continental, and from statements from Continental distributors in response to committee inquiry.

They ranged from "A. Smith, 3262 Fullerton ave., Chicago," to

Dewey to Serve His Full Term, Secretary Says

Albany, N. Y., July 2 (AP).—James C. Hagerty, secretary to Governor Dewey, tonight labeled as "nonsense" Radio Commentator Drew Pearson's report that the Governor would retire September 1 on doctor's orders.

Hagerty said Dewey had made it clear he would complete his term.

Dewey announced June 17 he would not run for reelection, saying doctors had advised a long rest to recover his health.

$1200 Given Widow of Slain Cabbie

Bolling Air Force Base GIs have contributed $1200 to the family of part-time cab driver Gordon C. Brown, jr., who was shot to death at the base May 27, it was learned yesterday.

An Air Force spokesman said the fund drive started in the barracks of the 1100th Motor Vehicle Squadron—to which Pvt. Gilbert W. Reynolds, who has been charged with and reportedly confessed to the killing, was attached.

The project was approved by the base commander, Col. Henry J. Amen. Word of it was spread around the base by first sergeants and the weekly paper, "The Bolling Beam" just in time for last Friday's payday. The fund is expected to

U. S. Resumes Dumping of Surplus Spuds

750 Carloads Reported Destroyed In a Single Day

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Uncle Sam is dumping potatoes again.

The spuds for which you pay from 4 to 8 cents a pound at your grocery, are going onto the dump pile in lots of up to 10,000 bushels, an accompanying photo from North Carolina shows.

Before they are dumped, they are dyed a deep purple. That's so nobody can resell them to the Government, or perhaps eat them.

Although the price support program for 1949 potatoes is not yet finished, the Commodity Credit Corporation has been dumping this year's crop for several weeks.

CCC's action is in accordance with the Agricultural Act of 1949, sometimes called the Anderson Farm Law, which, in spite of terrific losses totalling half a billion dollars in a few years, ordered that price supports for potatoes continue to be mandatory.

Up until June 22 the cost of protecting high prices for the 1949 crop had reached the staggering total of 78 milion dollars. The total cost of the year won't be known for a few more weeks, but some experts predict it will be 85 million while others say it will reach 100.

In the meantime, the Agriculture Department has started to buy and destroy surplus spuds from this year's crop. Up until June 11 it had bought $380,743 worth of new potatoes, and had destroyed $257,099 worth. That included virtually none from the Carolinas, where reports say an orgy of dumping potatoes started last week.

Although the cost for the 1949 crop is just a trifle more than one-third the 225 million dollars the 1948 crop cost, it still:

1. Amounts to about 55 cents from every man, woman and child in the United States.

2. Is equivalent to a year's pay for 14,432 men drawing $100 a week.

3. Is about two-thirds the cost of operating the District of Columbia.

Department records indicate that more than half the tremen-

Switchmen Reject Bid To End Strike

Union Tells Mediator It Will Supply Men To Move Materials Essential in Crisis

Chicago, July 2 (AP).—The AFL Switchmen's Union refused today to call off its week-old strike against five major Midwestern and Western railroads, as requested by the Government. But it offered to send enough men back to work to move any "essential" materials.

The union said it would assist in arranging movement over struck lines of any material deemed essential by the Government during the Korean war emergency.

The union was asked by John Thad Scott, jr., chairman of the National (Railway) Mediation Board, to end its strike in view of the "current critical developments in Korea."

The mediation chief, in a telegram from Washington yesterday, pleaded that the union restore full service promptly "in the national interest."

About 4000 switchmen left their posts June 25 on the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific, the Great Northern, the Chicago Great Western, the Denver, Rio Grande Western, and the Western Pacific.

Four of the roads shut down completely when the switchmen struck. The Great Northern continued to operate at reduced schedules.

The strike resulted after the union rejected a presidential fact-finding board's recommendations in a wage and hour dispute. The board turned down the union's demand for a 40-hour week at 48 hours pay. It recommended that the switchmen be granted the 40-hour week and an 18 cents an hour pay hike.

The switchmen argued this would reduce their take-home pay.

The union said it cannot completely call off the strike "for nothing," especially because the carriers and the mediation board have made what the union called "small effort" to settle it.

It also took issue with Scott over whether an emergency exists and what it is. It said President Truman has reported "no atmosphere of emergency," and has stated the Nation is not at war.

Albanians Accuse Italy of Secretly Landing Saboteurs

London, July 2 (U.P.).—Albania accused Italy today of parachuting saboteurs into the Soviet satellite state to overthrow Albania's Communist government "in cooperation with the espionage services" of the United States, Britain, Greece and Yugoslavia.

Albania said the Vatican also was involved in the plot. The protest note was handed to the Italian mission in Tirana and forwarded to the United Nations at Lake Success. It was distributed by the Soviet monitor in London.

Albania said "spies and saboteurs" were landed from an Italian military plane in July, 1949, to organize "terrorist" bands to fight against the Communist government.

D.C. Shouldn't Be Disappointed About Census, Director Says

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Director of the Census Roy V. Peel had no sympathy yesterday for those disappointed over the 792,234 population figure for Washington. He declared they had nothing to be disappointed about.

On the contrary, he said the census has moved the Nation's Capital from eleventh place among the Nation's cities to a "very certain ninth." In addition, the 1,452,242 count for Washington's metropolitan area made this one of the major "metropolitan areas of the country," he declared.

Part of the disappointment, he declared, came because the city figure came close to 800,000. Residents delight in round figures and show much disdain if a large sum falls any distance short of them, Dr. Peel explained.

The situation in Washington has been duplicated in counts throughout the country. The experience has been that the central city has "either lost a little, held its own or showed a slight gain, while suburban areas quite uniformly have been showing tremendous gains."

"It is a natural thing. The Washington metropolitan area is growing—that's where the additional people are going. They want more room, more light, more air," Dr. Peel said.

The majority of those forsaking Washington for more open areas are families with young children, Dr. Peel said. This leaves behind

Adjournment By August 1 Unlikely Now

Leaders Say Congress Will Stay in Session During Korean Crisis

NYHT News Service

Leaders of both parties said emphatically yesterday that Congress will stay on the job in Washington until and unless there is a definite settlement of the Korean war.

Democratic chieftains of the Senate and House said flatly that tentative plans for Congress to adjourn and go home August 1 would be tossed out the window so long as American forces were engaged in the Korean fighting.

"If there is no settlement in Korea, of course Congress will stay in session," said Senator Scott W. Lucas of Illinois, Democratic leader. "We have not even contemplated keeping our plans to adjourn August 1 unless the Korean crisis is settled before then."

"I feel very strongly the same way," echoed Representative Percy Priest of Tennessee, Democratic Whip of the House. "I am sure most members of the House want to stay here until some definite settlement of the Korean situation takes place."

It was made plain that members of Congress want to be on hand in the Capital in case additional military funds are called for to back up American troops or other legislation is needed to fulfill the Nation's commitments in Korea and the Far East.

No new defense funds have been requested, but the Senate Appropriations Committee was reported yesterday to have moved to restore nearly 400 million dollars slashed from military appropriations by the House.

The Armed Services subcommittee was disclosed to have recommended Defense Department funds totaling $13,290,000,000 for the current fiscal year. This is $383,458,000 more than was voted by the House. The increase, however, would not be allocated directly to the cost of Korean operations.

U. S. Declines Chiang Offer Of 33,000 Seasoned Troops

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

The United States yesterday withheld immediate acceptance of a Chinese offer of troops for Korea and, in effect, passed on to Gen. Douglas MacArthur the decision on their ultimate use.

In a note made public late yesterday, the State Department informed the Chinese government that in view of "the threat of invasion of Taiwan (Formosa)" by Chinese Communists, it felt the matter should be talked over first with MacArthur's headquarters. These discussions, this Government said, should cover "plans for the defense of the island (Formosa) against invasion prior to any final decision on the wisdom of reducing the defense forces on Taiwan by transfer of troops to Korea."

The note said it was understood MacArthur's headquarters would get in touch with Chinese military authorities "with a view to the dispatch from Tokyo of representatives of General MacArthur's headquarters for this purpose."

Release yesterday of the exchange of notes with Chiang Kai-shek's government revealed that the Chinese had offered an army of 33,000 men for use in Korea. These troops, the original Chinese note said, were "seasoned troops . . . seasoned for operations in plains or hilly terrain." It added that they carried "the best equipment at China's disposal."

The Chinese said they could furnish 20 C-46-type aircraft with a "reasonable amount" of air cover to transport part of this force to Korea. For transport by sea, the Chinese promised "a moderate amount" of naval escort. It was pointed out here, however, that had the offer been accepted practically all the lift, either by air or sea, would have had to be furnished by the United States and other nations cooperating under United Nations auspices in the Korean defense.

While the exchange of notes was being released at the State Department, President Truman landed from his yacht Williamsburg at the Naval Gun Factory and drove directly to Blair House. He was met at the dock by Defense Secretary Louis Johnson, who told reporters he had brought along the latest dispatches on the situation in Korea for Mr. Truman's attention.

"He likes to see the cables," said Johnson.

White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross, who came down from Philadelphia aboard the Williamsburg, said the President did not expect to turn to official business until today. Ross said Mr. Truman would spend the evening at Blair House with his daughter Margaret, who met him when he boarded the Williamsburg at Philadelphia. The President was making a leisurely weekend return from Valley Forge, Pa., where he addressed the Boy Scout Jamboree Friday night.

At the Pentagon yesterday, the Air Force announced its fighter and bomber aircraft had made 142 sorties over Korea during the 24 hours ended at 11 a. m., Washington time. Aircraft involved included B-29 and B-26 bombers and F-80, F-82 and F-51 fighters.

The B-29s, an Air Force spokesman said, operated against Communist lines of communications in North Korea, destroying at least

4 B-29s Destroyed, 7 U. S. Fighters, Korea Reds Claim

London, July 2 (UP)—The North Korean air force today claimed it had shot down two United States Superforts in combat and destroyed two others—along with seven American fighter planes—in air operations June 30.

(The U. S. Far East Air Force has said none of the B-29s has been lost so far. Yesterday the communique said 12 planes—fighters, light bombers and transports—have been lost.)

The North Korean communique, broadcast by the North China (Communist) News Agency claimed, the two Superforts were shot down during a raid on Kaisung city the night of June 29-30. The other two Superforts, it said, and the seven fighters were destroyed in a strike on Suwon airstrip.

India Reported Trying to End U. N. Deadlock

Efforts to Enlist Council Backing for Chinese Reds Learned

Lake Success, N. Y., July 2 (U.P.).—Alarmed by the outbreak of war in Korea, India was reported today to be trying to end the East-West deadlock in the United Nations by forcing the Security Council to seat Communist China.

Indian delegates here would not confirm that they had launched an active campaign to oust Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalists. But information from New Delhi indicated they had been instructed to confer with all Security Council members on the Chinese issue.

The East-West impasse in the U. N. began January 13 when Russia walked out of the Security Council after failing to get the Chinese Nationalists ousted. She contends all action taken since that time by the Council—including the vote of sanctions against Korea—is illegal because the Nationalists participated in it while Russia did not.

India is one of 16 U. N. members that have recognized the Chinese Communist regime.

The British informed the United States over the weekend that they would make no effort to seat the Chinese Communists at the meeting of the U. N. Economic and Social Council, which opened today at Geneva, Switzerland.

Britain previously had campaigned openly among the "doubtful" countries in an effort to persuade them to switch their support from the Nationalists to the Communists.

The Indians have gained a reputation at the U. N. for "pacification" measures. Sir Benegal Rau, chief of the Indian delegation and current president of the Security Council, tried to mediate the deadlock between Russia and the West on atomic energy last year. Last week, it was reported, he had planned to make an appeal for a meeting between President Truman and Soviet Premier Josef Stalin on the Korean crisis, but dropped the idea at the last minute.

The next big development at the U. N. over the Korean issue probably will come Wednesday, when the Security Council meets to decide whether to create a U. N. "war office" coordinating committee to handle the flow of aid to Korea.

Short Life Held Likely

Queuille Forms New Cabinet Of Right Without Socialists

Paris, July 2 (U.P.).—Premier Henri Queuille completed formation of his government today, giving France firm leadership again after eight days of political crisis.

The new cabinet—France's fourteenth since 1944—is pledged in advance to full cooperation with the United States and Britain in the Korean war.

It is another right-of-center government, made up of Queuille's own Radical Socialists, the Catholic Popular Republicans (MRP), the small, moderate Rightist Democratic and Socialist Union of Resistance and a few other independents and rightists.

It contained no Socialists. The 99 Socialist deputies in the National Assembly indorsed Queuille as Premier early yesterday in the vote of confidence, but party leaders decided later in the day to remain outside the government itself.

Thus, its life is as precarious as that of Georges Bidault's coalition that collapsed a week ago Saturday. It can be overthrown at any moment, as was the Bidault government, by a hostile Socialist vote.

Outstanding in the new government is the addition of former Premier Paul Reynaud as Minister of State in charge of relations with war-torn Indo-Chinese states and Far Eastern affairs generally.

Reynaud, who headed the French government just before the fall of the Third Republic in 1940, was back in the cabinet for the first time since 1948. He is a moderate rightist and one of the nation's top financial experts.

Robert Schuman, as was expected, was reappointed Minister of Foreign Affairs. Queuille, who had been Minister of Interior in the Bidault cabinet, kept this job along with the premiership.

The official list was:

Prime Minister and Minister of Interior: Henri Queuille (Radical Socialist).

Vice Premier: Georges Bidault (MRP).

Finance: Edgar Faure (Radical Socialist).

Foreign Affairs: Robert Schuman (MRP).

Minister of State for the Civil Service: Paul Giacobbi (Radical Socialist).

Nonintervention Policy Declared

Soviets to Stay Out of Korea, Their Organ in Berlin Says

Berlin, July 2 (NYHT).—Taegliche Rundschau, official Soviet organ here, affirmed today that the Soviet Union will refrain from intervening directly in the Korean war.

The newspaper accused the United States of intervening in the Korean war, maintained that American policy stands "in gross contrast to the attitude of the Soviet Union" and then went on to say:

"It is the basis of Soviet policy to refuse, in every case, to intervene in the inner affairs of another country, in this case Korea."

This sentence serves to clarify the Soviet position, which was left very vague by Moscow's note Friday rejecting an American request that it use its influence to end the Korean conflict. The note accused the United States of intervening and then simply referred to the principle of nonintervention.

The note was no indication whether Moscow intended to adhere to this principle once it had been violated by another power. The phrase quoted from Taegliche Rundschau, especially the words "in every case," suggests that Moscow will do so—at least to the extent of not committing its forces directly to the Korean war.

Nevertheless it seems unlikely Taegliche Rundschau would have affirmed the policy of nonintervention in the tone which it did if Moscow had decided to abandon it at the present time.

If this official organ correctly reflects Soviet policy, Moscow may limit itself to supplying planes, arms and other military equipment to the North Korean forces.

Yak With Soviet Insignia Among Planes Downed In Battles Aloft

Tokyo (Monday), July 3 (AP). Two fresh North Korean invader columns were reported driving south from conquered Seoul today, while two others that had moved southeast succeeded in outflanking the South Korean airfield and town of Suwon.

Word of the new thrust by the Communists came from an American advanced headquarters spokesman at Taejon, 73 miles south of Suwon.

The spokesman described the new North Korean forces crossing the Han as "tank columns." A Korean forward observer reported earlier that the invaders had from 30 to 40 tanks across the Han. These last apparently were separate from the latest crossings.

The situation admittedly had definitely worsened since yesterday, when the two southeastern flanking columns were spotted. These two, moving southeast from Seoul, were reported to have united and to have taken seven South Korean defense points in a battle in an undisclosed area.

Yanks Moving in

Without giving exact locations, AP Correspondent Tom Lambert, telephoning from Taejon, said if the Northerners continued at their present speed, they might soon contact American ground troops that moved north of Taejon Saturday by truck and train.

(Robert C. Miller, of the United Press, reported American troops have been ordered to the front as rapidly as possible to meet the new threat, but it was considered doubtful whether they will be able to get into action before 48 hours.

(He said the Americans have set up housekeeping at the advance American headquarters and laid out the welcome mat for thousands of GIs to come.

Korean Weather Made U. S. Planes Circle Six Hours

Tokyo, July 2 (AP).—Transport planes carrying the first American combat troops to South Korea circled their destination for six hours before a landing could be made through thick clouds and rain.

This was disclosed today by an authoritative source.

American fighters maintained constant cover to protect the lumbering transports from North Korean planes. A spokesman for the Far East Air Forces said, nevertheless, the airlift was handled without accident. The weather turned back at least one plane.

The transports, loaded with troops in full combat dress, took off from a southern Japanese air base in the rain. They encountered increasing cloudiness as they crossed the straits of Tsushima, the source said. Upon arrival at Korea the pilots found the field completely obscured.

The American movement northward toward battle positions consequently was delayed long after the original schedule.

Israel Votes to Back U. N. on Korea Action

Tel Aviv, July 2 (U.P.).—The Israeli cabinet has decided to support the United Nations action against Communist North Korea, but not to send military aid, official circles said today.

are moving northward by every available means of transportation.

(American officers in "advisory capacities" are with South Korean units attempting to hold the front until the American counter-offensive begins, he reported.

Weather Turns Fair

(The weather turned fair and officers expected the arrival of further reinforcements by airlift.)

Lambert said that U. S. troops arriving in Taejon last night barely had time to alight before they were rushed toward the fighting front. More South Korean troops also were ordered to the front.

The American forces will reinforce the South Korean troops who are attempting to turn back the two new Northern columns in the area of Yongdungpo, 4 miles west of Seoul.

U. S. warplanes tried repeatedly to bomb a Red tank concentration in this area, but the movement southward today indicates the Northerners still have power left.

A headquarters spokesman at Taejon said the two new columns crossed over the broad Han on a repaired railway bridge. The South Koreans blew the bridge in their retreat from Seoul.

The spokesman said one of the columns was led by two tanks and the other by four tanks.

One column which broke through yesterday threatened Suwon from the east. It apparently was in the area of Osan, which is about 10 miles south of Suwon.

A cautiously worded United States air communique said today American and Australian warplanes shot down two hostile planes Sunday, one of which bore Red star markings of the Russian air force.

Apparently striving to stall the Northern drive before it began, American and Australian warplanes raided the Seoul area Sunday.

This was the second report within a few hours of red-starred planes in action in the North Korean Communist invasion of the South.

American B-29 bombers of the 20th Air Force meanwhile heavily raided the North Korean airfield at Yonpo, 135 miles inside North Korea.

They were escorted by 14 Royal Australian Air Force Mustangs, in action for the first time in defense of the southern republic. The Australians also accompanied American F-80s and B-26s to the Seoul Area.

A South Korean observer relayed a report to the American field headquarters that the North Koreans had concentrated 30 to 40 tanks at the Seoul airstrip. Significantly, this is south of the Han River.

The airstrip, a rather sketchy installation, is so close to the river that in flood season it is almost surrounded by water. It is not to be confused with the Red-held Kimpo airfield 16 miles west and slightly north of Seoul.

A South Korean officer, who said he had been to Kimpo airfield since the Reds took it, was quoted as saying the two American B-29 raids there last week caused "carnage." He estimated as many as 2000 Red troops were killed by the bombs, which also razed Kimpo's buildings.

The invader air force, remarkably quiet for the past several days, roared back into offensive action.

A telephoned dispatch from temporary American headquarters in Taejon said 10 Yak fighters strafed Suwon and its airfield Sunday afternoon.

South Korean observers at Suwon said four of the Yaks bore Red stars. The advanced American headquarters said it could neither confirm nor deny this.

All the North Korean planes are Russian-made. If it is true that some bore Russian markings, it might be that the North Koreans simply had not taken time to repaint them.

Previous South Korean reports that Russian pilots were in action have been discounted or denied by American officers.

An American spokesman at Taejon, 73 miles south of Suwon, said "very possibly" some Americans were on the Suwon field at the time of the attack.

Confirmation by Reds

Fairly close confirmation of the latest Red moves came from the North Korean radio, although it portrayed the Northern offensive penetrations as more extensive than did the South Korean and American information.

A radio broadcast from Pyongyang, heard in Tokyo, said part of the Northern forces that crossed the border on June 25 had quickly captured Chunchon, 45 miles northeast of Seoul.

Then, said the broadcast, this column split, one part driving southwest and occupying Yongduri—40 miles due east of Seoul—on Saturday, and the other going southeast and taking Hoengsang, 55 miles east of Seoul, on the same day.

The Reds said a third offensive column was pressing on Suwon from the east, having crossed the Han River barrier east of Seoul on Saturday. This third column was said to be at or beyond Kyonganni, which is only 12 road miles from Ichon and 13 miles across country northeast of Suwon.

The Norehern announcement made no mention of the tank-led troops that in the first few days of the conflict blasted their way down the Uijongbu valley and seized Seoul on Wednesday.

The American spokesman in Taejon, however, said the Northerners were building up concentrations in and around Seoul. He said one Northern force southwest of Seoul at the Seoul airstrip included an estimated 30 Russian-built tanks, many trucks and troops.

Concentration At Sobinggo

Southeast of Seoul near the suburb of Sobinggo, the Reds had assembled an estimated two battalions of troops (possibly 2000 or more men), three or four tanks and three or four artillery pieces.

The Reds had built a pontoon bridge across the wide but shallow Han near Sobinggo, but the American spokesman in Taejon said he was "not sure it is still there," as U. S. planes had been scheduled to bomb it Sunday afternoon.

A South Korean military source said the Reds were moving more and more troops into Seoul, where they held a victory parade Sunday afternoon.

(Although there still was no formal censorship, American officers in Taejon started what was called "surveillance" of all news dispatches. This resulted in a news blackout from Taejon for nearly seven hours Sunday.)

Reds Claim Capture Of Important Base

Tokyo (Monday) July 3 (U.P.)—The Korean Communist Pyongyang Radio said today that North Korean troops had captured Yanpyong, 30 miles northeast of Suwon, and Wonju, 53 miles east of Suwon.

Wonju was described as the "main South Korean base in the central front."

Pyongyang Radio said the Communist air force attacked Suwon airfield. It was asserted one United States plane was shot down and 24 military cars were strafed in Sunday's operations.

General Dean, War II Hero, Chief in Korea

By The Associated Press

Maj. Gen. William F. Dean, the new commanding general of United States Army forces in Korea, was a celebrated division leader during World War II and received many decorations.

His Forty-fourth Infantry Division drove through Germany and Austria, capturing 30,000 prisoners and helping force the unconditional surrender of the Nineteenth German army.

He was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for "extraordinary heroism" and "utter disregard for personnal safety" for leading an infantry platoon through a continuous barrage of artillery fire in a successful mission to destroy opposing enemy batteries in the Enchenberg, France, area on December 8, 1944.

Dean was born August 1, 1899, at Carlyle, Clnton County, Ill., and was graduated from the University of California in 1922.

Israeli Border Attack Is Charged by Egypt

Alexandria, Egypt, July 2 (U.P.)—Israeli troops crossed the Egyptian border near Rafah Friday and killed a civilian, but were repulsed by Egyptian forces, War Minister Mustafa Nosrat said today.

Nosrat said Jewish soldiers attacked the village of Karam Ben Mosleh and set fire to granaries. Egyptian artillery and infantry drove the invaders back, he said. Egyptian guards have been ordered to return fire immediately in the future, Nosrat said.

Dean is a former commander of American occupation forces in South Korea before they were completely withdrawn in 1949.

It was announced that Brig. Gen. John H. Church, who became chief of the advanced American echelon when the decision was made Tuesday to send American aid to Korea, would be attached to Dean's headquarters as senior liaison officer.

Of the latest reported North Korean threat to defense positions in the South, MacArthur's headquarters said only that the Northerners had succeeded in getting a "moderate number" of tanks south of the Han River in the Seoul area.

It also said British and American naval forces off the east coast in the Samchok-Kangung area sank five of six Northern motor torpedo boats that they encountered. No details were given.

Free Europe Broadcasts Start Tuesday

New York, July 2 (U.P.)—Political leaders who fled from behind the Iron Curtain will send back their stories of freedom when Radio Free Europe starts broadcasting on the Fourth of July.

The broadcasts over the newly completed European transmitters owned and operated by the National Committee for a free Europe, Inc., will be beamed to eighy million persons living between Germany and Russia.

The committee sponsoring the broadcasts is a group of private American citizens. Committee President Dewitt C. Poole said, "A prime objective of Radio Free Europe will be to bring to these peoples the voices of their democratic leaders who have been driven into exile by Communist oppression."

"They will give the lie to Communist propaganda and tell their listeners of the undying struggle to assure freedom everywhere."

Another committee official, Frank Altschul, said Independence Day was chosen for the start of the broadcasts because "the Fourth is a pivotal date in the long history of man's struggle for freedom."

Turkish Group Formed For Fighting in Korea

Istanbul, July 2 (U.P.)—Editor Tevfik Yuruten, son of Turkish parliamentary deputy Senihi Yuruten, tody set up a "Society of Volunteers" for fighting in South Korea.

Yuruten emphasized his group was a private project financed by contributions. He said about 500 young Turks already have registered.

ten trucks, one locomotive and an ammunition dump. The fighters and light bombers, he said, accounted for at least ten tanks destroyed and 29 probably destroyed in operations against North Korean ground forces south of the 38th parallel.

The Army spokesman referred during yesterday's press briefing to four bridges built by Red forces over the Han River, three of which were earlier reported to have been destroyed by United States aircraft. Under questioning, he said he "supposed" the destroyed bridges had been rebuilt.

The State Department's note to China, according to Press Officer Lincoln White, was drawn after consultation with and with full concurrance of the Defense Department. MacArthur had been informed of the Chinese offer, White said.

The note, which was handed Saturday to Twsen-ling Tsui, counsellor of the Chinese Embassy, by Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for Far Eastern Affairs Livingston T. Merchant, was couched in careful diplomatic terms. It thanked the Chinese government for its "prompt and substantial demonstration of support for the United Nations" before declining immediate acceptance of its offer.

In making the exchange of notes public, the State Department cautioned that it did not "in any way" assume to speak for the United Nations. It referred to its note to the Chinese as an "expression of opinion."

The first Chinese offer of troops was made last Thursday in a note handed to Merchant by Chinese Ambassador V. K. Wellington Koo. It expressed willingness to send troops to South Korea and informed this Government the Chinese would approach MacArthur to "inquire about the positive measures which may be desired."

This late was followed by a second, delivered Friday by Chinese Minister Stao-Hwa Tan to Fulton Freeman, acting deputy director of Chinese Affairs. The note detailed the troops, their equipment and the means of transportation at the disposal of the Chinese. It said the 33,000 troops offered could be made ready to leave Formosa in five days.

White said Secretary of State Dean Acheson spent yesterday afternoon at his desk to keep in close touch with the volatile foreign situation.

NOTICE TO WATER CONSUMERS
IN THE
WASHINGTON SUBURBAN SANITARY DISTRICT
Due to the advent of hot weather the water consumption of the Sanitary District has now reached such amount that greater conservation in the use of water from the public supply must be exercised to properly protect the public health and safety.
IT IS THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT PURSUANT TO THE PROVISIONS OF SECTION 10, CHAPTER 122 OF THE ACTS OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF MARYLAND OF 1918 AND AMENDMENTS THERETO, IT SHALL BE UNLAWFUL FOR ANY PERSON, FIRM OR CORPORATION, OR HIS, HER OR THEIR AGENTS OR EMPLOYEES TO USE ANY WATER SUPPLY FURNISHED BY THIS COMMISSION FOR THE PURPOSE OF WATERING OR SPRINKLING ANY LAWNS, SHRUBBERY, FLOWERS OR GARDENS, OR FOR ANY PURPOSE OTHER THAN FOR FAMILY OR BUSINESS USE WITHIN THE BUILDING AFTER JULY 1, 1950, UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE BY THIS COMMISSION, EXCEPT THAT THE WATERING OF PLANTS AND SHRUBBERY BY THE USE OF A SPRINKLING CAN OR BUCKET, WITHOUT THE USE OF A HOSE OR PIPES, AND OF NEWLY LAID SOD UNDER THE CONDITIONS OF A SPECIAL PERMIT, WILL BE PERMITTED.
Some of the necessary works to augment the water supply and the distribution system of the Sanitary District have been completed and the remainder should be completed well before next summer so that it will not be necessary to impose similar restrictions on the use of water. The cooperation of the people in the conservation of water is therefore earnestly requested at this time. If it is forthcoming there will be, barring unforeseen major accident, enough water for the essential needs of the community and to provide for the tremendous building operations now occurring in the area.

Czech Communists Reveal New Purge

Red Star Strafers

UP Reporter Wounded in Suwon Raid

(United Press War Correspondent Jack James, who scored a two-hour beat on the outbreak of the Korean war, today became the first American correspondent wounded in the fighting.—Editor's note.)

By Jack James
United Press Reporter

Suwon, Korea, July 2 (U.P.).—I was wounded today in a strafing attack by a scout plane bearing the Red Star of Soviet Russia.

I was talking to a group of South Korean soldiers when the plane swooped low over the Suwon airstrip in the third and heaviest attack of the day. Six of the soldiers were wounded too. I was hit in the foot.

None of us was hurt seriously.

Fourteen planes in all made two passes at the field. Four were Russian-made Yak fighters. Ten were IL-10 reconnaissance planes, four plainly marked with the Red Star of Russia. The other 10 planes bore the conventional North Korean insignia—a red star within a yellow circle.

First Russian Insignia

This was the first time I had seen a plane bearing the Soviet insignia.

The Suwon airstrip, though still in South Korean hands, no longer is being used by American airlift planes from Japan.

South Korean forces defending Suwon, 20 miles south of captured Seoul, are in danger of being flanked by a reported North Korean drive near Kim Yang Jang, about 30 miles southeast of Suwon. The exact strength of the Communist drive is not known, but it is believed the Communist troops are traveling in a high-speed convoy of at least 90 trucks. They are said to be meeting little or no opposition.

American air attacks have slowed up the Communist drives in the last few days. But the South Korean forces are losing ground along the Han River south of Seoul. The Communists now hold several beachheads on the south bank of the Han, and at least two spearheads have penetrated several thousand yards to the south.

(James also told how he returned to Suwon with the American military mission after the premature evacuation of the city last week.)

Rides In Downpour

It was an all-night back-breaking ride over the rough Korean roads through a steady downpour. With me were Signal Corps Sergt. N. Fries of Port Austin, Wash.; Corpl. R. A. Ackers of Gary, Ind., and Pvt. Roger McMillan, Omaha, Nebr.

After we arrived at defense headquarters in Suwon, I accompanied American Army Capt. E. M. Lowry of San Diego, Calif., and Maj. F. R. Speach, Australian member of the United Nations military observer team, to a division command post about one mile behind the front line.

There we found a slim, worried youngster, Col. Lim Sun Ha, puzzling over the problem of how to fill the gaps in his line caused by the unnanounced withdrawal of his regiments from Suwon.

Overhead American Air Force bombers droned by on their way to strike targets in and near Seoul.

Prague, July 2 (AP).—The Czech Communist Party announced plans today to weed out undesirable members in its greatest purge since it took power in this country in February, 1948.

An almost identical move by the Chinese Communist Party was reported yesterday from Hongkong.

The central committee of the Czech party, in a decision published in the Communist newspaper Rude Pravo, said every party member will be put on probation from next September 1 to December 15 and new party cards will be issued New Year's Day.

The committee said each member will have to prove "how he defends the party against the infiltration of the enemy." It did not identify the enemy. Those "who have not an honest attitude towards the party and harm it will be expelled," the committee said.

Those who "in spite of good will cannot understand and carry out the party's policy" will merely be crossed off the party list. This ruling will get rid of them without imposing the stigma of expulsion.

Others "who have not fulfilled their duties for lack of political consciousness but who have shown signs they will overcome their faults" will be reduced to the status of candidates.

In the last probationary period, from October 1, 1948, to January 31, 1949, the party purged 107,133 members. It cut its rolls to 2,311,066, including 1,788,383 members and 522,683 candidates.

"This time probation will be much stricter and more thorough than in 1948," the committee declared.

The Czech Communist Party one of the largest outside the Soviet Union—heads the National Front, a coalition that runs the government.

Caracas Embassy Of U. S. Is Stoned By 'Antiwar' Mob

Caracas, Venezuela, July 2 (AP).—A group of 30 Communists or sympathizers stoned the United States Embassy here today. Two of the demonstrators were captured.

The attack, in which windows were smashed, started just as Frederick Kuhn, press attache, was leaving the building in the suburb of San Bernadino, about three miles from the center of Caracas.

Kuhn, carrying a bat on his way to an amateur baseball game, helped disperse the assailants, most of whom fled in automobiles. Kuhn collared one of the demonstrators and police captured the other.

The group carried placards, reading "Down With Yankee Imperialism and Creators and Inciters of War," "Against Warmongers," and "For Peace and Democracy."

Kohlberg Says Red Spy List Given Truman

By The Associated Press

Alfred Kohlberg, New York importer and publisher, said in a letter made public yesterday that in 1945 President Truman received the names of 150 "Soviet atom spies" in the United States from MacKenzie King, former Prime Minister of Canada.

"Not one has been arrested," Kohlberg declared. He said the names were listed in a secret report which, he added, King "brought in person" to Mr. Truman.

Kohlberg acknowledged last April that he had been supplying data to Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.), for use in connection with McCarthy's charges that the State Department harbors Communists and fellow travelers. Kohlberg is an active supporter of the Chinese Nationalist government and a long-time foe of what he considers Communist activities.

His statement regarding Russian "atom spies" came to light through an open letter addressed to Representative Buchanan (D., Pa.), chairman of a special House committee investigating lobbying activities. A Buchanan committee source said the group has made a preliminary inquiry into Kohlberg's activities. The source declined to elaborate.

2 GOP Senators Hint Korean Arms Lag Probe

NYHT News Service

Two Republican Senators yesterday indicated they would demand a congressional investigation when the current Korean crisis is over into the Truman Administration's failure to supply the American-trained South Korean military forces with arms.

Senators Homer Ferguson of Michigan and William F. Knowland of California predicted that the American people would be "shocked" by the disclosures of such an inquiry, but both agreed that it would have to await settlement of the Korean war.

Senator Knowland is a member of the Armed Services Committee and Senator Ferguson is a member of the Armed Services Subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee.

Members of the Appropriations subcommittee, it was learned yesterday, questioned officials of the Defense and State Departments at a secret hearing last week about what had happened to funds appropriated by Congress last fall for arms aid to Korea.

Congress made available last year more than 100 million dollars that might have been used to arm the South Koreans—including $27,640,000 for military assistance allocated to Korea, Iran and the Philippines and 75 million dollars made available to the President for use is the general area of China.

The Appropriations subcommittee was reportedly told that no arms were supplied to Korea under the program and that the military assistance funds made available by Congress in October were still unspent.

4 Congress Leaders Call Korea Decision Peace Aid

Four Congressional leaders agreed yesterday that the President's decision to aid Korea offers the best hope of peace, but differed on the wisdom of the Administration's policies before the conflict.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) said that "weak" United States policy in the Far East invited the Communist attack on southern Korea by letting it appear to be a soft spot.

Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) said he believed the attack to be "part of a plan of Russia to select a testing ground to see what the remainder of the world would do . . . If our own country and the other countries had stood idly by . . . it would result in a great war."

Senator Warren Magnusson (D., Wash.) said there were two different situations in the Orient. "We couldn't work through the United Nations on the Formosan thing in the beginning; we would have had to take unilateral action . . . But the situation where one country comes across the line, invades another country in outrageous attack, as Senator Taft has said, is a situation entirely different."

The three, along with Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.), expressed their opinions of the "Meet Your Congress" broadcast over station WINX. Blair M. Moody was moderator.

British Gold, Dollar Reserves Make Big Gain During Quarter

London, July 2 (NYHT).—The gold and dollar reserves of Great Britain and the sterling area rose by the postwar record figure of approximately 360 million dollars during the second quarter of this year, it was learned tonight.

This rise will be revealed by Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Stafford Cripps this weekend when he is expected to inform Commons that the gold and dollar reserves now amount to nearly $2,350,000,000—their highest figure since the end of 1946, when they totaled $2,696,000,000.

According to available figures, Britain and the sterling area are believed to have earned a net dollar surplus of more than 100 million dollars during the second quarter, compared to 40 million dollars in the first quarter. The January-March surplus was the first earned by Britain and the sterling area since before the war.

The estimated jump in the reserves means Britain has been able to bank the whole of its reimbursements under the European Recovery Program and its drawings on the Canadian loan during the April-June quarter. The ERP payments amounted to approximately 215 million dollars, while the drawings on the Canadian loan approached 30 million dollars.

Although this jump in the reserves puts them at a total scarcely one quarter of their prewar level, it reflects the steady and rapid improvements in the world economic position of Britain and the sterling area.

Everything at Steak!

By Albert Purchey Mesirow

FREEDOM is composed of a lot of little things; of duties as well as liberties. Freedom is my right to serve you in whatever way I think will please you most . . . and my duty to do so to the best of my abilities. Freedom is your privilege to order what you please when you come into our establishment . . . and your responsibility to allow us a fair chance to satisfy your wants. Freedom makes it possible for Chef Heller to add an extra pinch of seasoning to his searing sauce when his duty to our patrons demands; permits our salad chef to keep his cole slaw recipe a secret . . . and requires him to make each serving his best; Freedom allows our waiters to attend you without servility, but demands courtesy compatible with their dignity as free men. And Freedom is my right to close Parchey's on Independence Day . . . and my duty to remind our staff to enjoy themselves in whatever way they individually see fit. I hope you have a good time, too, and that we will see you at 19th & K Sts., N.W., Wednesday for lunch and/or dinner.

The perfect preface to the perfect summer meal is jellied consomme. And the perfect jellied consomme is a triumph of culinary skill, the reward for patience and worthy compensation for toilsome slavery to old-fashioned methods. To achieve the sparkling color, the firm but tender texture and the properly delicate shading of an inherently robust flavor requires nothing less than consummate art. The finest jellied consomme is made in a relatively small iron kettle. Into this is placed a great thighbone of beef, a slab of lean meat cut from the tough but flavorful neck of cornfed cattle, and a delicately balanced bouquet of such savory garden seasonings as thyme, marjoram, parsley and celery greens; a generous dash of salt and a handful of pepper corns. All this is covered with clear, cold water and set to simmer for long hours over a leisurely flame. As the liquid bubbles lazily off into mouth-watering steam, it is partially replaced, until every last ounce of rich juice and flavor has been cooked out of the solids. These are then removed, the aromatic liquid is transferred to a covered glass container, and placed into the refrigerator to cool. In due course it will jell itself, without the aid of added gelatines. Made thus, cold consomme is an epicurean masterpiece; a shimmery, cooling, appetite-arousing delight! Try our kind soon. It's only twenty-five cents for a generous cupful, or forty-five cents for a nearly meal-sized bowl. Our address: 19th at K Sts., N.W.

New faces we have greeted recently include those of Mr. M. Allen Bost, Professor G. H. Pickar, Miss Georgia Ann Cranch, Mr. D. S. Mayer and Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Coughlin, of Silver Spring. steaks! steaks! steaks!

Lost in the mists of relative antiquity is the origin of what we know today as the Old Fashioned Cocktail. A friend tells me that his grandfather, an unbending Britisher of the old school, called it a "Manhattan," although it bears little resemblance to what is called the Manhattan now-a-days. Here at Parchey's, we have been told, we make the finest Old Fashioned Cocktails south of Labrador. That's probably an exaggeration (says he, modestly!) but I think you'll find one well worth the trifling fifty cents we charge per full-sized, made-to-order potion. We use old-fashioned care in its preparation. We muddle a lump of sugar, soaked in genuine Angostura Bitters, in a tablespoon of water until it becomes a fine rich syrup. We add ice. We pour over this a fine Glenmore whiskey, noted for its smoothness and flavor. And then we garnish with fresh fruit . . . a slice of orange, a sliver of lemon, a spear of pineapple. And we crown this delectable concoction with a rosy, full-stemmed Maraschino cherry. Marination takes but a moment, and by the time the frosty glass reaches your eager hand, there's been a miraculous wedding of flavors: of fruit, bitters, sugar and spirits that warms your heart as it cools your palate, soothes your soul as it inspires your appetite; that revives your jaded interest and stimulates you to a proper appreciation of the meal you are about to enjoy! Try one of our Old Fashioneds today. Just stop by the oasis on the southwest corner 19th and K sts., N.W.

One-Party System Seen Hurting South

Aid 'Sabotaged'

M'Carthy Hits Acheson on Korea Policy

By the United Press

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), charged yesterday that "American boys are dying in Korea because the State Department sabotaged our aid" there.

Renewing his attack on the Department on the National Broadcasting Company's television show, "Meet the Press," he said that "up until three or four days" before President Truman made his announcement "switching our Far Eastern policy," Secretary of State Dean Acheson "was telling the world we would not interfere in South Korea."

McCarthy also assailed anew the Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee, headed by Sen. Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) which has been investigating his charges the State Department is overrun with Communists and fellow-travelers.

"I am completely dissatisfied with the investigation," he said. "We have witnessed the most fantastic exhibition ever put on by a Senate committee."

Asked about published reports that a corroborative document is missing from his 1949 State income tax return, McCarthy commented:

"I gather that the (Wisconsin) tax department has lost one of the documents attached to my return."

He described the Milwaukee Journal, which first carried the story, as the "Milwaukee version of the Washington Daily Worker, or Washington Post."

"You'll find that they'll headline the loss of the document, but when they find it you won't hear about it," he said.

Walton Takes Post At Groveton Station

Lieut. C. L. Fuller has been replaced at the Groveton station near Alexandria by Lieut. Sam Walton, Virginia State Police headquarters in Richmond announced yesterday.

Fuller has been transferred to the safety division in Richmond. Walton was promoted from sergeant simultaneously with his appointment.

Senator Russell (D., Ga.) yesterday said the one-party system has weakened Dixie's political strength nationally.

Russell predicted that "conservatives—those who believe in constitutional government" will eventually get together politically in the Nation.

Interviewed in a broadcast, he said:

"I think we have suffered and been neglected and lost our proportionate strength in the Government because of our devotion to the one-party system.

"If the Republican Party were to go back to a philosophy of defending the rights of the States and protecting business, and nominate men on a national ticket in whom the South had confidence, I think the people of the Nation would be utterly amazed by the strength that would be developed for the Republican ticket in the South."

Political parties are in a process of evolution throughout the Nation, he said, adding:

"Whether it will be Democrats who will join the Republican Party or whether a new party—a constitutional party—will grow out of the present complicated structure of the two parties, I cannot say."

But if "those labeled conservatives" do not team up, he said, "if we continue along the present trend to let both of the great major parties be, in effect, controlled by small minority groups, it will be disastrous to our form of Government."

Mortgage Debts Rise $1,000,000,000

Mortgage debts of individuals continued to increase at a near-record rate in the first quarter of 1950, the Securities and Exchange Commission reported yesterday.

The rise in that period was listed as one billion dollars, as compared with a 600 million dollar addition to mortgage debt in the first quarter of 1949. The 1950 upswing was in line with this year's record home building.

Other consumer debt was reduced in the first quarter, as is usual for that season, but the net repayment of 500 million dollars was only half the size of the reduction in the first quarter of 1949.

Savings in liquid form—including cash, accounts in banks and savings and loan associations, securities purchases, and private and Government insurance and pension reserves—ran only 600 million dollars for the first quarter of 1950 against 900 million dollars in comparable 1949.

9000 Catholic Priests, Nuns Held Victims of Red Terrorism

Vatican City, July 2 (U.P.).—More than 9000 Catholic priests, nuns and other Church representatives have been killed, arrested, deported or reported missing behind the Iron Curtain since the war, Church quarters said today.

This mounting persecution of the Church plus Communist efforts to set up "national" churches in Iron Curtain countries were important reasons behind Pope Pius' new excommunication decree two days ago. It imposed major excommunication on persons who undermine legal Catholic authorities and assume Church office without Vatican approval.

Figures compiled by the Italian Catholic Action organization, which frequently reflects the Vatican view, gave this country-by-country picture behind the Iron Curtain:

Ukraine: 3600 priests liquidated. Three monastic orders, six women's orders, six bishopric seminaries, 100 schools, 100 church associations, 1000 churches and chapels closed.

In Baltic States

Baltic States: 1000 church representatives arrested or missing. Major part of the priesthood deported, imprisoned or killed.

In 1947, Vatican-Polish pact lapsed. Religious education banned. Catholic youth groups and Boy Scouts dissolved.

In 1950, 700 priests in Poland thrown in prison, 1000 sent to Siberia.

Czechoslovakia: Persecutions began in 1945. In Slovakia, Bohemia, Moravia, Catholic organizations dissolved, church property confiscated, Catholic press liquidated.

In 1949, Archbishop Josef Beran of Prague placed under house arrest, church schools closed, Catholic education prohibited, seminaries seized. In 1950, church resistance continued, more priests in prison.

Hungary: June 9, 1950, 1000 priests and nuns arrested. At least 538 known dead, imprisoned or deported before this. Bishop Apor of Gyor assassinated. Cardinal Mindszenty sentenced to life imprisonment. Church property confiscated, 250 priests imprisoned, 80 priests fled Hungary. For practical purposes, the Catholic church has ceased to exist.

State Church in Romania

Romania: 710 priests persecuted. Orthodox church used to eliminate Catholic church by being made state church. All Catholic bishops arrested, 700 priests deported. Trials of bishops expected.

Bulgaria: 120 priests and nuns arrested or driven from country. State-approved Orthodox church replaced Catholic church, religious education banned, organizations dissolved. Seminaries, now controlled by state, include lessons on Marx-Lenin-Stalin doctrine.

Albania: 715 priests arrested or driven from the country. Church no longer able to operate will bishops in jail.

In Yugoslavia: 1954 priests arrested, killed or deported. Archbishop Stepinac sentenced to 16 years in prison. Situation "eased somewhat" after Tito's break with Cominform.

Servicemen Find Gay Successor to Old USO

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

The orchestra was playing "Frenesi" as the tow-headed marine corporal from Quantico got off the elevator at the YWCA "Penthouse"—recreation center for servicemen.

"I couldn't get up last night," the corporal said to the young woman who directs the dance and other activities for servicemen.

A worried expression held to the young woman's face. She knew the deepening Korean crisis was making passes harder to get.

"Oh, the same story everywhere," she said, and her voice trailed off into the worry again.

A bit of the feeling of war has crept into the air at servicemen's recreation points around town and, as a result, a new interest in GI activities is developing.

Takes Place of USO

A new organization called the Associated Services for the Armed Forces has come into being to fill the gap left by the departure of the USO.

Under the ASAF banner, three groups have banded to make off-base life for servicemen pleasanter.

They are the Armed Services YMCA, the Jewish Welfare Board and the National Catholic Community Service. The YWCA is among other groups carrying on extensive activities for soldiers, sailors, marines and airmen.

A quick tour of the city Saturday night provided but a touchstone of their many servicemen's programs, varying from picnics to quiz programs, from hayrides to moonlight cruises.

Saturday night, as is proper for a Saturday night, it was mostly dancing.

And Bridge, Too

At the YMCA at 1736 G st. nw., there were some bridge tables going and a group at the piano singing "You Wear a Tulip," before the dance and you saw a sailor from Anacostia, a soldier from Fort Belvoir, an airman from Bolling and a marine from Quantico either giving with the vocal chords or bidding for grand slam with one of the pretty hostesses.

Developments of the last few days have made the ASAF realize it may be called on to expand, Fred Lasch was saying. He doubles as executive secretary of the Armed Forces YMCA and chairman of the ASAF staff conference.

"We plan to seek $53,000 for 1951," he said, "but we might need to ask for $100,000 now. With this Korean situation . . . Well, there's no telling what might happen."

Another dance was going on Saturday night at the St. Matthew's Cathedral Club in conjunction with the National Catholic Community Service. Miss Isabelle Powell, who like many ASAF workers had extensive USO experience, was pleasantly welcoming servicemen to the dance floor.

The Jewish Welfare Board, of which Philip Schiff is Washington representative, also conducts a comprehensive program. Among the activities of the JWB and other groups are visits to hospitals to take recreation to veterans.

At Walter Reed Hospital during one of the ward parties, an 18-year-old soldier came in and immediately headed for the farthest corner of the room. A hostess tried to draw him out and learned, after much conversation, that he sorely missed his 7-year-old "kid sister."

The following week, a Washington girl of the same age as his sister was there to greet him and the pair had a fine time playing together, Moe Hoffman, Armed Service Director of the Jewish Welfare Board here, reported. "There are all sorts of problems in meeting soldier's needs, but this was an easy one," he added.

The ASAF is indeed a cooperative program. The Citizens Committee for the National Capital area for the ASAF operates under three cochairman—a Protestant, a Catholic and a Jew—each serving a six-months term.

Present chairman is Joseph David Kaufman, and the other two are Henry P. Erwin and Percy Brady.

The YWCA, at 17th and K sts. nw., while not a part of the ASAF, also furnishes an extensive recreation program under the leadership of Olga Zhivkovich, director of the young adult program. An effort is made ot integrate serviceman and civilian youth activities . . . "Servicemen don't like to feel they're apart," says Miss Zhivkovich."

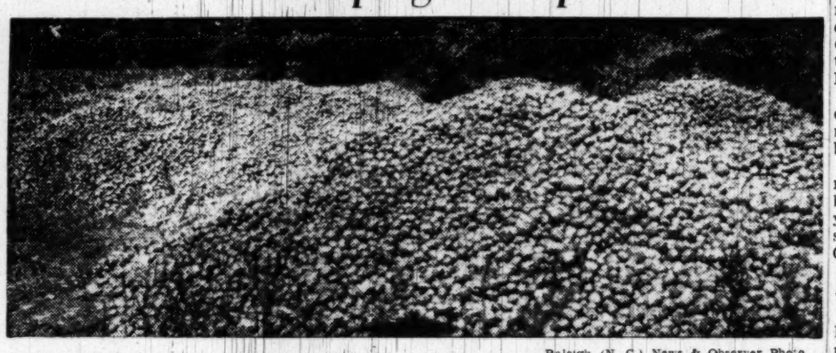
U. S. Resumes Dumping of Surplus Potatoes



Raleigh (N. C.) News & Observer Photo

'FED TO LIVESTOCK'—Half of North Carolina's potato crop, estimated at 10 million bushels, is rotting on dumps, according to the Raleigh (N. C.) News and Observer. Picture, taken on the farm of C. A. Wright, Jarvisburg, Currituck County, shows about 8000 bushels in a pile. At last year's price they were worth $10,000. They were dyed a deep purple to prevent their being picked up and resold or used for food. Books of the Commodity Credit Corporation, however, do not report dumping of Tarheel spuds. They are "fed to livestock" dous amounts the Government bought of the 1949 crop was destroyed. The books of the Commodity Credit Corporation show that up until June 22, some $6,489,000 worth was "dumped." Another $46,078,000 was listed as "fed to livestock" which means the same thing. The food value to livestock is about zero, unless the spuds are cooked, as in Eastern Europe. In many places they were dumped on the ground, permitted to freeze, and cattle and hogs turned on them. Sometimes, if other food was scarce, the stock ate some.

Meantime rubber manufacturers are worried for fear a war emergency may catch this country without enough of the wherewithal to make artificial rubber. One of those ingredients is alcohol. Potatoes make good alcohol. But the cost of transporting them to an alcohol plant is too high. That would increase the already burdensome cost of the price support program.

The Department's books show that until June 22, some $25,496 worth of new potatoes had been bought in Alabama; $351,817 in Florida; $3312 in Louisiana and only $58 worth in South Carolina. The Government paid an average of $1.03 a sack of 100 pounds. Records show that $100,344 worth was given to charitable institutions as provided in the Anderson Farm Law of 1949, and $12,299 to penal institutions.

Aroostook Lion's Share

CCC records also disclosed one reason why potato growers have been so successful in inducing Congress to keep price supports on their product. Farmers in 44 of the 48 States shared in the Government subsidies. However, one county in Maine, Aroostook, as usual, got the lion's share. Payments to about 400 commercial growers in Aroostook totaled almost 30 million dollars. (As of June 22 it was exactly $29,578,000.) That figures out at about $7500 apiece.

Next to Maine came New York. Empire State farmers totaled 10½ million. There are abput 1800 commercial growers in New York. The average was about $6000 per farm. The New York payments were divided. About $4,409,000 went to Long Island and $6,024,000 to up-State growers.

Illinois for the second straight year was not on the list. Neither were West Virginia, Mississippi, nor New Mexico.

Nearby Virginia, famous for its demands for economy in Government, got $634,000 last year; Maryland only $66,000. Virginia got $3,844,000 and Maryland $1,558,000 out of the 1948 crop.

The largest States in amounts sold to the Government, after Maine and New York, were North Dakota, $5,614,000; Colorado, $3,433,000; Idaho, $3,163,000; Minnesota, $3,001,000; Pennsylvania, $2,550,000; California, $2,529,000; Connecticut, $1,393,000; Massachusetts, $1,271,000; Michigan, $1,722,000; New Jersey, $2,681,000; Oregon, $1,592,000, and Washington, $1,167,000.

HERE'S WHY WE DATE SKYLARK:

It's your proof, your guarantee that your loaf of Skylark was freshly baked for today. Most other brands do not carry this proof. Always buy Skylark, in the red and white, candy-striped wrapper. You always know that Skylark is first-day fresh!

Each day's sale of Skylark is carefully estimated in advance. Then, Skylark's expert bakers mix all the fine ingredients, then pop the baking pans into the oven.

Finally, as each toasty-brown loaf comes out, it is wax wrapped and sealed with a special end seal.

This end seal carries the day, Monday, or Tuesday, and so on. Then the loaves are rushed to your Safeway Store, just in time for sale. If there should be any unsold dated bread at the end of the day, it is removed—never again sold as fresh bread. No guesswork with Skylark—you know it's first-day fresh!

Synthetic Rubber Program Is Studied

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Defense considerations, reinforced by heavy pressure from the rubber industry, make it likely that the Government will soon reactivate one or more of its standby synthetic rubber plants, built during the war.

Consideration of the desirability of producing another 50,000 to 75,000 long tons of synthetic rubber annually was active even before the Korean crisis, it was learned.

In the light of the present situation in the Far East, the Administration may decide that even more synthetic plants ought to be reopened.

Industry Backs Move

The rubber industry inself has been exerting pressure for such action, as a means of forcing down the speculator-inflated price of raw rubber. It rose to as much as 35 cents a pound in June, and although it has since leveled down to around 30 to 32 cents it is still miles above the price set for the Government-produced synthetic, of 18½ cents a pound.

If a decision is taken, as now seems probable, to increase the output of synthetic, it will be less because of the price situation than the supply situation, however.

In the past several months, each new estimate of United States rubber consumption has risen. The latest official figure was 1,115,000 long tons to be used this year. Unofficial guesses are that it is even higher now. As late as May, however, the estimate was 90,000 tons less, or 1,025,000.

Would Up Natural Stockpile

The latest figure is at about the limit of the capacity of the American rubber-processing industry to chew up. Therefore, if synthetic production is increased by another 50,000 to 75,000 tons a year, the additional amount will probably go to Government defense stockpiles.

More precisely, the increase in synthetic production will free an equivalent amount of natural rubber to be stockpiled.

As the figures now stand, there are about 720,000 tons of natural rubber available this year to the United States. It produces another 520,000 tons of general and special purpose synthetic rubbers.

Assuming present consumption of about 1,130,000 or 1,140,000 tons, this leaves only 100,000 tons a year for stockpiling.

Transport Picture Uncertain

Furthermore, this assumes that everything works perfectly—that there are no difficulties with availability or transportation of natural rubber. It leaves little margin of safety.

But a very considerable margin of safety seems required, in view of the fact that more than 95 percent of the world's crude rubber comes from the Far East.

Even without the new threat to peace in that area posed by the Korean war, the chief producers—Indo-China, Malaya and Indonesia—are already beset with internal difficulties and Communist guerilla disturbances.

These considerations, therefore, will probably impel the Government to bring into activity one or more of the five Federally owned synthetic plants which were put on a standby footing after the war.

Two are in Los Angeles, and one each in Port Neches, Tex., Institute, W. Va., and Louisville, Ky. All produce GR-S, or general purpose rubber.

The complex of producer-feedstock plants considered most economical to operate of those now shut down is the one on the Texas Gulf, the Port Neches plant and a butadiene feeder plant at Houston.

Area Population Rise Cited

the single persons or families with older children, and the result is that the density of population is declining in the city, he said.

The Washington exodus, in large measure, is the undoubling of the many families who have doubled up during the war, Dr. Peel said. "They have gotten their own places out in the suburbs."

Acutely aware of the problems this mass movement is creating, the Census Bureau has expressed the need for planning in the new, booming suburbs—the need for more transportation, roadways, bridges, education and other facilities, Dr. Peel said.

The Nation's over-all census is shaping up along the lines the bureau expected, he commented, with the total approaching 151 million. The distribution of population indicates particular growth along the Pacific, Great Lake States and Texas, he added.

Commissioner Guy Mason, who received the census figures from the bureau last week, said they indicated that, ultimately, everyone working in the District would be living outside, and the Federal Government would probably take over the District.

Spokesmen for some Washington groups saw the trend of movement to the suburban areas as temporary and predicted a swing back to the District as the transportation problem increases and the rehabilitation of District land progresses.

"I think the movement to the suburbs is dying out," said Herbert P. Leeman, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations. "The transportation problem of these suburban dwellers is already acute."

Leeman said he expects the trend to reverse itself in the next decade as the District rehabilitates some of its areas. "There is plenty of good property in the District," he said, "that can be developed into nice apartments and houses."

William H. Press, executive secretary of the Board of Trade, said he agreed with this prediction because citizens will want to live close to the center of the city for the sake of convenience.

He said he saw no reason to be saddened by the more rapid expansion of the suburban areas because he regards the entire metropolitan area as an entity.

Oliver M. Walker, president of the Washington Real Estate Board, said the situation presented by the census figures was due primarily to the fact that new building has been concentrated in the suburbs in the past 10 years.

Woolsey W. Hall, president of the Federation of Civic Associations, said he believes the District population will continue to grow but declared this expansion must come through Government rehabilitation of slum and blighted areas.

Prayer Recited

Korean Crisis Is Topic of Sermons Here

The Korean crisis was the subject of prayer and sermon yesterday in many Washington churches.

In a letter to all Catholic pastors in the Washington Archdiocese, Archbishop Patrick A. O'Boyle requested the pastors to have their congregations recite a special prayer daily.

Read in all Catholic churches yesterday, the letter also urged Catholics to observe July 4 by attending Mass and "imploring Christ to grant America the graces it needs in this hour."

The prayer, for "the unfortunate people of Korea, Catholic missionaries there, and our gallant servicemen," implores Divine wisdom for the President and Congress "in their decisions for safeguardnig the welfare of this Nation and the many people dependent upon us."

At Wesley Methodist

The Rev. C. Stanley Lowell, minister of the Wesley Methodist Church, asserted in his 11 a. m. sermon that the "fundamental issues" in Korea "are spiritual and will be spiritually determined.

"Armies and weapons have little consequence apart from the ideas that give them potency and direction. The menace of communism lies in the fact," Mr. Lowell said, "that it represents a great surge of idealism that has been commandeered in the service of Russian imperialism.

"The force is too formidable to be overcome by planes, tanks and guns. You cannot beat an idea with a bullet. The only way you can beat it is with a better idea."

Mr. Lowell predicted that the "physical coercion and legal suppression" used in an attempt to defeat communism in America will fail because such devices have never yet been able to stop an idea...

"The only successful opposition will be provided by a democracy that believes and acts in terms of truth, justice and peace."

Singularly Blessed

The Rev. Edgar L. Pennington of Mobile, Ala., historiographer of the Episcopal Church, said that America has been "singularly blessed with ability and resources" as a chosen nation. Dr. Pennington, rector of St. John's Church in Mobile, delivered a sermon at St. John's Episcopal Church in Washington.

"Rooted and grounded in faith," he said, "America's destiny is to act as "trustee to administer God's goodness," not to dominate the other nations of the world.

Vicki Cummings—Rehearsal Queen

By Richard L. Coe

BEAUTY, BEAST AND OTHERS: Vicki Cummings, glittering and chatty, talks about the year she's been away. Opening tomorrow night at Olney, Vicki's starred in this locale more frequently than any other player in the last year; she was in "Design for Living" at Meridian Hill and "For Love or Money" at Olney last summer and now she's to be in "Light Up the Sky."

"Darling," darlings blonde Vicki, "I've gotten to be the Rehearsal Queen of the World. In the last year I've spent 10 weeks rehearsing for two plays. 'Mr. Barry's Etchings' ran six weeks, 'A Phoenix Too Frequent' a week. And for 25-odd television shows I've rehearsed and rehearsed and rehearsed. Here I am rehearsing again and someday I know I'll just explode from the lines I've learned. What with plays and TV, darling, it's been 30 parts in less than a year.

"Yes, I was sick, too, about 'Phoenix.' It was the roughest opening night audience I've ever encountered. Everyone sat back and dared Christopher Fry to make them smile. It was so awful, darling, I just wanted the stage to open up and swallow me. It wasn't the producers' fault, either; I think everyone had just heard so much about Fry that he hardly had a chance.

"I don't think, though, that 'The Lady's Not for Burning' will have the same trouble. After all, it's not a one-act play, it's a better play and Gielgud's production will be marvelous because after all, it's had a full year in London and time to get used to those lines. They may be verse, but Fry's also the comic artist of our day."

Vicki, who began in musical comedy and has worked her way into stardom sans tunes, is in a comparatively plush spot for an actress. She's got a couple of ventures for the fall, two in Gotham, one for London, and can't make up her mind which. Depends on a lot of things. Like many a player, she likes TV drama because it keeps you working, even though you rehearse for two weeks for one night's pay.

She's quite a girl, this Rehearsal Queen of the World, as you'll see when she plays that skating champ who invests her hard-earned dough in a play that's having tryout trouble in Boston. It's the part Moss Hart had to tone down for fear certain people would mistake the lady for Eleanor Holm.

THE BEAST is one Tiger Joe Marsh, who wrassles here this Wednesday night as he did last—to win . . . Tiger Joe, who enters the ring in a tiger skin outfit with tigers' heads as epaulets, all designed by "Peter Pan's" Ralph Alswang, is mighty movie-minded . . . You saw him as the court bailiff in "Pinky" (or did you?) and he's mighty excited about his role as the Bo'sun's mate in Twentieth Century-Fox' "Panic in the Streets," filmed in New Orleans and now bound for the Playhouse . . . Elia Kazan directed both and since Tiger Joe seems to be a pal of his, insisted on parts for him . . . He's set now for a written-in role in the movie "A Streetcar Named Desire" and is also to be in Zapata," which Kazan is to film in Mexico . . . Born in Chicago, he became Yugoslav Heavyweight Wrestling Champion of the World and any night of the week you'll find him tearing up the mat . . . The Tiger may be tough as all his pictures show, but at lunch the other day he looked just like a bespectacled, overweight Government worker.

Dorothy Maynor Brilliant Soloist in Watergate Concert

By Paul Hume

The Sesquicentennial season of summer concerts at the Watergate opened last night before a large audience.

Dorothy Maynor was soloist: the National Symphony Orchestra, under Howard Mitchell, played. In the final selection the men of the new Sesquicentennial Chorus made their first appearance of the year.

The majority of the program was by Americans. Maynor's five songs were by native composers, and the choral piece closing the program was by Randall Thompson, born and trained in this country.

Top honors for the night went to Miss Maynor. Her voice is at its most beautiful these days. When she finished her second encore, the Crucifixion, there was not a sound from the huge listening crowd for many seconds. Then, as she left the stage, a tumult of shouting and applause broke forth.

Maynor gives to music she sings a spiritual quality that infuses it with a beauty compounded of far more than any musical elements. That she is a perfect musician and vocalist is no longer important. It is what she does with her unique gifts that make her, as another music critic has said, "one of the greatest artists."

Thomas Jefferson wrote the text for the Testament of Freedom. This piece, set for male chorus and orchestra, closed the program. Paul Callaway trained his chorus to a brilliant edge, and under Mitchell they and the orchestra gave the work a stunning reading.

It was violently overamplified, as was most of the evening. Finesse was evident through it all; the music has stirring spots, notably in the opening and closing pages. The middle sections are weak, but for an occasion piece, such as last night, it has real point.

Miss Maynor was presented with a silver medal, authorized by Congress, to commemorate the Sesquicentennial. In presenting it to her, Emerson Meyers, music director of the Sesquicentennial, spoke of the statue of Freedom that stands on our Capitol. That statue is reproduced on the medal.

The opening of the Sesquicentennial concerts was musically great, thanks to Dorothy Maynor. The orchestra was ragged in the Rosenkavalier Suite, the amplification tortured the ears except when she was singing. But things should improve by the second concert on Wednesday.

Rate Offered To Groups for Sesqui Drama

Discounts up to 15 percent on group purchases of tickets for the Sesquicentennial drama, "Faith of Our Fathers," were announced yesterday.

If you buy more than 100 tickets for any one performance you will get a 10 percent discount, National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission Manager Paul Massmann said.

And if you buy every ticket in the Rock Creek Park amphitheater—4056 of them—you get 15 percent off.

First performance of the symphonic play is scheduled August 5. It will be presented nightly, except Mondays, through September 30.

Strong Quake Sways Buildings in Bogota

Bogota, Colombia, July 2 (U.P.)—A strong earthquqake shook Bogota at approximately 5:45 p. m. (4:45 EDT) today. There were no early reports of casualties or major damages.

The shock lasted only 2 seconds but was strong enough to cause larger buildings to sway and send their residents rushing into the streets.

Great Godfrey! You can read the life story of Arthur Godfrey in The Washington Post. Look for it beginning next Sunday.

VA Hits at Racket In School Supplies

The Veterans' Administration struck out yesterday at "overcharges" to the Government in school purchases of supplies for veteran trainees.

The agency alleged a few schools had set up their own organizations for the main purpose of providing supplies at jacked-up prices. VA announced stringent rules it figures will save hundreds of thousands of dollars a year.

VA said henceforth veterans training under the GI bill, or under Public Law 16 for disabled veterans, may receive tools, supplies and equipment at Government expense only under these conditions:

1. Schools must obtain the supplies on a competitive bid bases.

2. Where schools have set up supply corporations or affiliates primarily to provide supplies to the schools and they win in bidding, VA will pay only the amount the corporaton or affiliate actually pays.

3. VA will pay only for supplies "essential to the training process," and not for materials that normally should be part of the school's capital equipment.

"Some schools have been billing VA for supplies at exceptionally high prices," the agency said. "The new regulations should eliminate these overcharges, for now schools will have to buy supplies at the lowest price at which they can be had on a competitive market.

"They also should put a stop to practices of a relative handful of schools of setting up affiliated organizations mainly for the purpose of providing supplies at inflated prices."

Falls Kill Three

5 Die, 131 Hurt In D. C. Home Accidents

Accidents in homes killed five persons and sent 131 others to hospitals last week, the District Red Cross Accident Prevention Service reported yesterday.

The breakdown of fatalities shows three victims of falls, one person poisoned and a 58-year-old woman drowned in a bathtub.

Summer heat indirectly increased home accidents; three persons cut their fingertips in whizzing electric fans.

Falls caused most non-fatal injuries, 44. Eight persons were burned, including a boy who fell against a toaster and a girl who suffered severe burns from carbolic acid on her face, arms and legs.

Hospitals reported cases of children who tried to digest disinfectant, turpentine, deodorant and rat poison.

Hundreds of the names and addresses were in Illinois, mostly in Chicago, while hundreds more were listed for New York.

Some lists gave only such identifications as "Happy Stiltz," "Skibo," "Cy," "Eddie," and "George Zouganiles." Others were listed as "504 Locust st., Carter Lake, Iowa." or similar addresses.

The map shows that Continental sells its race wire news to the Howard Sports Daily in Baltimore, a well known fact. Wires link Howard with the following points, according to the Senate document:

Richmond and Virginia Beach, Va., Greensboro and Charlotte, N. C., Columbia, S. C. and Augusta, Ga.

Area Customers Listed

The Baltimore customers listed by Howard included newspapers, radio stations, three Democratic Clubs, a businessmen's club and some individuals. Listed at Virginia Beach were the 58 Club, R. Pardue and H. D. Summers. Listed for West Ocean City, Md., presumably a telephone connection, was H. Burbage.

Other Howard customers included E. L. Cherry, Ocean View, Va., Rick Raft Club, West Ocean City, Md., O. B. Morris, Berlin, Md., John Brooks, Cumberland, Md., S. Friedlander, Laurel, Md., H. H. Horner, Pen Mar, Md.

Howard customers whose service has been stopped but whose wires were not removed as of May 5 included T. Moscato, Edgewood, Md., H. Williams, Dundalk, Md., L. L. Roberts, Virginia Beach, Va., and L. J. Lyng, Otter Point, Md. Street addresses were given for most of the customers.

Included in the testimony and hearings made public yesterday were a series of letters from State attorneys general on the proposed bill to end interstate transmission of gambling information. Several said such a bill would be helpful, some queried did not answer, others were noncommittal.

Louisianan Rejects Aid

Louisiana's Bolivar E. Kemp, jr., replied that he did not believe that any such "mythical" crime syndicate as has been suggested exists within his State. He quoted the State's antigambling law and said it enabled local officials "to stamp out such an evil (if such an evil existed)." Kemp concluded that a Federal law would be "another encroachment on the rights of the States . . ."

The Senate list included a statement by Daily Sports News, Continental's New Orleans subscriber, that it has 62 drops on one 901-mile circuit and 56 drops on two other circuits of 285 miles, covering Louisiana and Mississippi.

Western Union furnished a list of addresses of these drops—spots where the race wire news is available—and it included 24 places in New Orleans. That city's mayor, DeLesseps Morrison, has been a leader in demanding that Federal aid be given the States and cities in cleaning out the Nation-wide wire business.

Meanwhile, the family of the 24-year-old Post Office Department typewriter repairman is trying to adjust to the situation thrust upon it.

Mrs. Audrey Brown, 22, and four-year-old Robert have moved out of the house at 224 Carmody Hills dr., Carmody Hills, Md., which Brown had built and was driving a cab in his spare time to finance. Her mother, Mrs. Irene Williams, said the young widow had decided to rent the house and live with her parents at 306 73d st., a few blocks away.

Mrs. Williams said her daughter intended to study typing and shorthand and then look for a job.

Brown was found lying near his cab at the air base about 2 a. m. with a bullet in his head. After questioning 4000 persons at the base, police announced the 18-year-old Reynolds had confessed committing the murder during an attempted robbery.

2 Canadian Rail Unions Vote for Strike Action

Montreal, July 2 (AP).—Some 35,000 workers have voted overwhelmingly in favor of strike action against three Canadian railways.

This was announced by a joint negotiating committee of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employes and Other Transport Workers, and the Brotherhood of Transport Employes.

The announcement said the committee was authorized to call a strike if and when it deems such action advisable. Committee officials said, however, they felt strike action should not be taken independently of other railway employes. Fifteen international unions of other railway employes in nonrunning trades also have voted for strike action.

The CBRE and the BTE are asking the Canadian National Railways, Canadian Pacific Railway and the Ontario Northland Railways for a general wage increase of 10 cents an hour, the checkoff, five-day week and other benefits.

Earl Plans to Open Glamis Castle to Tours

London, July 2 (U.P.).—Queen Elizabeth's birthplace—the 1000-year-old Scottish castle of Glamis—will be opened to tourists at two shillings (29 cents) a head, her nephew said yesterday.

The sixteenth Earl of Strathmore, 32, said the move was made to assist in the upkeep of the castle, which is also the birthplace of Princess Margaret.

"Taxation is savage, but we will find a way," the Earl said.

Poor Pay Blamed In Grade School Teacher Shortage

St. Louis, July 2 (AP).—A grave shortage of elementary school teachers during the next 10 years was predicted today in preliminary reports to the National Education Association Convention.

The convention officially opens Monday. About 4000 teachers are expected.

T. M. Stinnett, associate secretary of the NEA's national committee on teacher education and professional standards, said only 22,460 elementary school teachers were graduated this year.

The Nation needs 103,000 new teachers each year until 1960, he declared.

He attributed the shortage to poor pay and the great increase in enrollment because of "war babies." A partial solution, he stated, would be a shifting downward of surplus high school teachers.

Police Officials Rebut Charges Of Brutality

Metropolitan Police brass last night belittled charges of police brutality in making arrests on Washington streets.

Claims of abusive treatment and "entrapment" were leveled by Henry Thomas, president of the AFL Building Laborers' Union Local 74 during the District Round Table radio forum broadcast over Station WWDC.

Thomas said the situation isn't as serious as it was eight or nine years ago, but the only difference in methods of arrest, he asserted, "is that they don't beat a man over the head today."

In a recent instance, Thomas charged, 10 men were "trapped" at the corner of 5th and K sts. nw., and were sentenced to a $5 fine or five days in jail for incommoding the sidewalk.

In that case, he said, after the men were asked if they wanted jobs, they were loaded aboard police operated trucks and taken to the Second Precinct Station. "They were pushed, shoved around and called names," he added.

Capt. Robert V. Murray, assistant chief of detectives, replied that the men were convicted as charged, and that any police mistreatment should have been reported to the trial judge.

C. Frank Reifsnyder, an assistant United States Attorney for the District, said he had never heard of a case where the judge refused to hear complaints against arresting officers.

"I think the courts have always been careful to protect the rights of individuals," he added.

On the question of police brutality in obtaining confessions, Reifsnyder expressed the belief that most of such complaints were simply defense tactics to get around a confession.

After questioning by police, he said, prisoners are privileged to get physical treatment when they arrive at the jail.

"In 90 percent of the cases where prisoners complain of duress, I've found that they made no complaint to the jail physician when they arrived at the jail," he said.

Both Murray and Inspector Clarence H. Lutz agreed that the crime situation here is not as serious as it has been pictured in a recent Collier's Magazine article, "Terror in Washington."

The large number of aggravated assault charges reported in the article did not carry an analysis of final disposition of the cases, he pointed out.

Many of these turned out to be domestic arguments which were not prosecuted, and many others were reduced to simple assault in court, he declared.

"The steaks from Safeway, I find, have more MEAT per dollar"
(less bone and fat)

...reports Home Economist SALLY JARRARD

"It surprised me—the enormous difference trimming makes in what you really pay for a serving of meat—steak, for example. I don't believe many women are aware of it, but you've got to compare trimming when you compare price per pound if you want meat value"

Sally Jarrard, a leading home economist and authority on food, made this study of meat trimming as an independent consultant

You get more center portion of steak in a Safeway trim-before-weighing T-Bone

TOUGH-MEAT TAIL ("its steer meat not steak) REMOVED (many markets tuck tails underneath but they're still there!)
Top-end gristle and bones, excess fat trimmed off
The part Safeway trims off before weighing average almost half-a-pound per steak so your money buys more juicy center portion

In a steak or any cut, good eating meat is what Safeway guarantees you. Free of excess bone, fat and gristle. Top grades only . . . at peak eating perfection!

In all that makes meat good to eat you get the best buy at Safeway. Every time!

Safeway's trim-before-weighing method gives you more meat in every pound you pay for (because per-pound meat prices at Safeway are always on the trimmed cuts!).

And the quality of meat that Safeway sells is the quality folks go for. Safeway beef and lamb are of the top government grades only . . . Safeway pork and veal of the top grades, too. And Safeway meat is prepared for market with special care, so you enjoy finest flavor, juicy tenderness.

Try buying all your meat at Safeway . . . to please your family and get more value, too!

TAKE IT HOME
COOK IT THE WAY YOU LIKE
EAT EVERY BIT OF IT

If, after eating, you are not completely satisfied that it is fine eating meat and a top value T-bone steak for your money . . .

Halfway Intelligence

Reports are current that David K. E. Bruce may be offered the job of Director of Central Intelligence to succeed Rear Admiral Roscoe H. Hillenkoetter. We hope they are true. Mr. Bruce, who is now Ambassador to France, is a top-notch public servant who would add stature and valuable experience to the Central Intelligence Agency. He had a noteworthy wartime career in the OSS, is a profound student of the intelligence function, has an unrivaled experience of the systems operated by other countries, and has turned out to be an accomplished diplomat.

CIA does not have the stature it should have as the eyes and ears of the Government. Whether this is because it is a new agency superimposed on existing intelligence operations, or because it is presided over by a military man of relatively junior rank, it is a fact. At any rate, other agencies, notably the State and Defense Departments, do not trust CIA, and will not take its reports seriously. This is a major defect which is merely emphasized by some of the roundabout channels set up for relaying important information. The function of CIA, moreover, seems to have been misconceived by its director. Admiral Hillenkoetter told inquiring Senators the other day that it was not the duty of CIA to evaluate its reports or make any predictions about intentions of other countries.

Precisely what, then, is its function? The furnishing of background information about "capabilities" of other countries, such as was done on Korea, leaves out the essential ingredient. CIA is not expected to consult a crystal ball, but it is relied upon to assemble the best experts to give meaning to the information it furnishes. Indeed, it is clear from the debate which preceded the formal establishment of the CIA in the National Security Act of 1947 that evaluation was regarded as its major task. It was supposed to correlate and direct the efforts of existing intelligence agencies, fill in the gaps, and above all evaluate the intelligence produced.

Without expert evaluation intelligence is like unkneaded dough. Perhaps the worst feature is that lack of evaluation plays right into Russian hands. It is not the fact that one country has troops massed on the border of another country that is significant, but what is intended by those troops. If the function of intelligence were limited to defining "capabilities," the Russians could have the United States on edge in a dozen trouble spots from Yugoslavia to Tibet. If Admiral Hillenkoetter has stated the duty of CIA accurately, then the horizon needs to be lifted.

Appeal To Deaf Ears

The Switchmen's Union has rejected the appeal of the National Mediation Board for an end to the strike against five Western roads that has delayed iron ore and munitions shipments needed on the Korean fighting front; but the union has agreed to provide enough men to keep strategic materials moving. The Korean war, however, merely highlights the necessity of putting an end to strikes that tie up rail transportation and do incalculable damage to the economy in either peacetime or war. In recent years the railway unions have been increasingly disposed to exercise their legal right to strike in disregard of the recommendations of emergency boards set up under the Railway Labor Act after attempts at mediation of disputes have failed. Often they have succeeded in obtaining additional concessions. Moreover, an increasing number of disputes over technical issues that would formerly have been settled by the National Adjustment Board have had to be handled by emergency boards.

Further appeals to patriotism may or may not avert the threatened strike of the trainmen and conductors. But the United States cannot rely on wars to provide a solution of the problem of strikes that endanger the national welfare under any conditions. Nor can it afford to encourage strikes against the railroads by failing to back up the recommendations of the impartial boards appointed by the President to investigate disputes and propose terms of settlement after collective bargaining negotiations have broken down. Yet there is more than a hint that the Government would have been willing, had the switchmen gone back to work, to continue this shortsighted policy by upsetting the findings of the emergency board that has been handling the disputes involving the switchmen, trainmen and conductors. For the union was assured that the National Mediation Board would resume negotiations at once with the parties to the switchmen's dispute, if the strike were called off.

Since the companies have agreed to accept the compromise recommendations of the emergency board, we fail to see why the Government should make another attempt at mediation unless the mediators are prepared to put pressure on railway managements to make further concessions. If the switchmen were rewarded, the trainmen and conductors would expect to receive comparable rewards. The result would be further to discredit the efficacy of the Railway Labor Act as a means of peaceful settlement of disputes and to encourage the unions to rely increasingly on strikes as weapons of coercion when the present crisis has passed.

Peace Force Command

The first use of military force at the request of the United Nations is giving rise to some difficult problems, the most pressing of which is how separate national units fighting to uphold the Charter shall be controlled. The Charter provides that "the Military Staff Committee shall be responsible under the Security Council for the strategic direction of any armed forces placed at the disposal of the Security Council." The Military Staff Committee is also supposed to "advise and assist" the Council on all questions relating to "the employment and command of forces placed at its disposal." Since the Soviet Union, along with other permanent members of the Council, is represented on the Military Staff Committee, this requirement is said to be giving U. N. officials a good deal of concern.

The effort to adhere to the letter as well as the spirit of the Charter in repelling the aggression against Korea is highly commendable. Only by respecting the solemn obligations of the Charter can the free world distinguish its action from the lawlessness of the aggressors. At the same time it must be recognized that the Charter, like the Constitution of the United States, is a flexible instrument. Its purpose is to facilitate, not to hamstring, collective defense against aggression. It does not say that the Military Staff Committee is the only instrumentality that the Security Council may use to carry out its purposes. To permit a division within the MSC to thwart effective U. N. action would be to hang a great principle on a minor technicality.

The Military Staff Committee was created on the assumption that the Security Council would acquire military forces directly amenable to its orders. The nations were to agree in advance with the Council as to what forces they would commit to U. N. use. Moscow has consistently blocked any step in this direction, however, with the result that the Council has no forces at its command. As we see it, therefore, the MSC remains entirely out of the picture. There is nothing for it to do. In the absence of any U. N. forces, the Council has had to rely upon national military units responding to its requests of June 25 and 27. This is in accord with the Charter. Indeed, Article 43 provides:

> All members of the United Nations, in order to contribute to the maintenance of international peace and security, undertake to make available to the Security Council, on its call and in accordance with a special agreement or agreements, armed forces, assistance, and facilities, including rights of passage, necessary for the purpose of maintaining international peace and security.

This seems to leave the Council wide discretion in making agreements with the cooperating powers for the supply of forces in a manner that will be most effective at the time. To date the United States has taken the responsibility of carrying out the policy announced by the Council. But five of the other 37 countries supporting the Council's action have indicated willingness to supply military aid. These efforts must necessarily be unified, and for that purpose the Council may set up a special unification committee or designate the United States as the unifying agency to carry out the U. N. policy. It need not rely upon the machinery that would have been in operation if the Big Five had been in agreement and U. N. forces were already in existence. Here is one of the notable facts about the Council. It may choose any one of several methods of maintaining or restoring peace and adapt the means of carrying its policies into effect to the needs of the occasion.

CCC Extension

From a superficial glance at the tie vote in the Senate on the conference report extending borrowing powers of the Commodity Credit Corporation, it might appear that Republicans had tried a backdoor method of crippling the farm price support program. This was not wholly the case, despite the fact that 32 of the 35 votes against the compromise were Republican. Actually the main controversy centered on the Magnuson-Morse amendment covering tariffs on imports of surplus farm commodities, and Senator Magnuson explained that CCC borrowing powers were not involved. Nevertheless, the tie vote was mischievous and could have caused damage if Vice President Barkley had not broken the impasse in favor of the conference measure. The announcement of price support levels for the 1950 crop already had been delayed several months because the CCC was without funds.

Most of the argument was what procedure should be followed in the imposition of fees or import quotas on foreign commodities which might injure the price support program. The Magnuson-Morse amendment, which the Senate had passed, would have made the Secretary of Agriculture responsible for initiating investigations, holding hearings, and transmitting his findings to the President. The effect of this would have been to short-circuit the Tariff Commission, which now makes investigations in such situations; it also would have made the Secretary of Agriculture a sort of prosecutor and judge combined. We think the conference report, which was finally adopted, was much wiser in preserving the authority of the Tariff Commission to make the findings.

It is quite true that investigations by the Tariff Commission are sometimes unduly protracted. Nonetheless, it is obvious that any quotas or fees imposed to protect the price-support program have an important bearing on foreign relations; their determination is properly in the hands of an independent agency rather than the department promoting price supports. Here is really the basic anomaly, as was shown by the much-expressed senatorial distrust of international agreements touching on agricultural commodities. It simply is not possible to reconcile a high price-support program with efforts to promote international trade; and if foreign commodities of one sort, such as potatoes, are kept out, the effect is likely to be felt in curtailed foreign imports of other American commodities. This anomaly cannot be resolved until Congress finds a way to liquidate the tremendous Government investment in surplus commodities and comes up with a realistic support program based on protection against disaster rather than perpetuation of inflated prices.

M. Queuille's Troubles

With the support of the Popular Republicans—who announced their readiness to participate in the new government—M. Henri Queuille, a Radical Socialist, was approved last week by the Assembly as Premier of France. Yesterday M. Queuille was able to announce his cabinet, chosen entirely from the parties of the right center. The most important name in the list was that of M. Schuman who was retained as Minister of Foreign Affairs, thereby reviving hopes for the success of the Schuman plan, which received a serious blow through the collapse of the Bidault government while the plan itself was still under international discussion. Yet it may be that the initiative lost to France through this revelation of her continued political and economic instability cannot now be regained.

President Auriol appears to have appealed to M. Queuille in a kind of desperation, after other efforts to organize a government had failed. M. Queuille is an adroit and highly experienced politician with remarkable gifts of persuasion and conciliation. His previous government set an extraordinary record (according to standards of the Fourth Republic) of durability. It lasted 13 months from September, 1948, until October, 1949. His work last week, however, was considerably aided by the developments and implications of the Korean crisis, which have caused considerable alarm in France and have helped to emphasize the necessity of subordinating party interest to national unity.

The tenure of M. Queuille's government will depend to a large extent upon the behavior of the Socialists and of a certain group of deputies of the right who are under the influence of General de Gaulle. It was these two elements in the Assembly which, acting in concert with the Communists, overthrew M. Bidault on a motion for a vote of confidence. If M. Queuille should be defeated on a similar test, the immediate election of a new Assembly would become mandatory under the constitution of the Fourth Republic. In M. Queuille's favor is the fact that of all parties in the Assembly the Socialists are most anxious to avoid a general election at this time; for it would almost certainly result in a further loss of their strength to the Communists on one side and to center parties on the other. It might even lead to their extinction as a major force in French politics. Thus it is likely that, as far as the Assembly goes, M. Queuille will be able to hold the Socialists in line by the mere threat of calling for a vote of confidence. Meanwhile, however, the Socialists have declined to participate in the government.

In contrast to the Socialists the party of General de Gaulle, now almost without formal representation in the Assembly, would have much to gain by forcing a general election, if it can do so. The municipal and departmental elections indicate that the Gaullists would be certain to capture a very large number of seats in the new Assembly, enough perhaps to give them a balance of power.

Another problem which is likely to give M. Queuille some anxious hours is the long dormant question of religious education. It has been suddenly raised anew by some of the Popular Republicans, evidently alarmed lest the initiative in this matter be seized by the Gaullists who are their principal competitors for the votes of French Catholics. This highly explosive question would put M. Queuille in an awkward spot, for his own party is, of course, traditionally anticlerical, although far less aggressively so nowadays than it was under the Third Republic. But the Radicals apart, the question of religious education, if forced to a vote, is one that would almost certainly reunite Socialists and Communists in opposition.

More Jobs Needed

The Census Bureau reports that about 1,750,000 persons were added to the working force between May and early June, bringing the total number employed almost up to the record level of July, 1948. At the same time, however, unemployment, which had been steadily declining since February, turned upward again, rising to 3,384,000 as compared with 3,057,000 in May. The increase in the number of unemployed was, to be sure, smaller than anticipated, and is said to be due entirely to the influx of school-age persons into the labor market, unemployment among adult workers having registered a further decline. Nevertheless, the record emphasizes the difficulty of providing sufficient jobs to absorb a rapidly growing labor force even under favorable conditions, with agricultural employment approaching its seasonal peak and industrial activity at high and rising levels.

Taft And Wherry

The United States finds itself in an emergency, and Senators Robert Taft and Kenneth Wherry leap to the attack. The attack against the enemy? No. Such action would call for that breadth of vision found in statesmen, and is not for such as these. The attack is, rather, against the Democratic Party in general, and the Secretary of State in particular.

When the Nation suddenly becomes involved in a crisis of the first magnitude, calling for the casting aside of internecine struggles and petty, self-seeking political squabbling which serve only to destroy the possibility of presenting a solid front to our enemies and to the world, what do these stalwarts do? Do they pledge their complete and unequivocal personal support to the President, and attempt to rally the entire moral and intellectual resources of their party behind him and the bold program he has adopted, as would seem only logical in leaders on the national level?

They do not.

Instead, they continue their policy of business as usual, and engage in further political sniping at a distinguished public servant, Mr. Dean Acheson, and at the department he represents. Mr. Acheson and the State Department have had to divert a good deal of their time and energy to carrying on a running fight with the Republican "leadership." Any lack of success which they have enjoyed has been in no small measure caused and aggravated by Republican congressional obstructive tactics, (i. e. the Korean aid bill, itself), and open attacks, (the immoral performance of the Senate's and the Nation's shame, Senator Joseph McCarthy).

Now, Mr. Taft and Mr. Wherry, refusing to forget their political self-concern even in these parlous times, call for the resignation of Mr. Acheson, striving, even now, to hamper his effectiveness.

The utterances of Messrs. Taft and Wherry stand out as all the more flagitious when compared with the vastly different, statesmanlike statement of Mr. Herbert Hoover, calling for full support of the President, and unity of thought in this trying hour.

Senators Taft and Wherry have, by their actions, irrevocably branded themselves as Republicans first, and Americans last. WILLIAM J. VOUGHT.

Canada For Union

Concentration of interest upon Korea and its defense appears to have precluded attention in the press to an event which Senator Kefauver predicted in the Senate on June 29 "will dwarf in history the aggression of the Communist puppets in Korea."

That event was the passage by the Canadian Senate that day, with only one dissenting vote, of a resolution approving the calling of a convention to explore federal union of the Atlantic democracies, as proposed in the Atlantic union resolution now before Congress.

Senator Kefauver hailed this action by the Senate of Canada as "a new and significant milestone in the history of freedom" and the first official legislative action toward "a union which could prevent war, assure increasing prosperity and expand progressively the frontiers of freedom." Pointing out that such a union "is the over-all and enduring answer to the threat of the Communists, not only in Korea but in other areas of Europe and Asia," he called upon the Senate to take action on the Atlantic union resolution.

Poor Rail Service

I want to concur with the June 28 letter of the gentleman who said the railroads charge too much and give too little. I just returned from a round trip to Manhattan, Kans., at a cost of $128, part of it made by coach. The train from here to St. Louis was on time, but the Pullmans with berths were old and antiquated, though they had fine accommodations for those who had enough money to occupy rooms; they are trying to drive the passengers who merely buy berths off the best trains.

The train from Kansas City to Manhattan lost one hour on that short run; its employes told me by no means to trust the streamliner returning as it had never been on time since it started and was now running 5 to 6 hours late. So I left Manhattan early on a passenger train which lost 1¼ hours getting to Kansas City. I made a Washington limited in St. Louis, after an overnight ontime ride on an antiquated sleeper from Kansas City to St. Louis, and the limited 3½ hours late getting here. Accommodations everywhere for passengers who merely bought berths were antiquated, inconvenient and not worth the money.

"North Carolina Upset"

In your June 26 editorial, you conclude, and I believe erroneously, that the result of the recent senatorial primary in North Carolina is another repudiation of the Truman Administration. Let me point out that Willis Smith, who ultimately defeated Senator Frank Graham, discovered in the middle of the fight that anti-Administration tactics could not win for him.

In the first primary, Mr. Smith attacked the national and State administrations with great fury. On May 27, the voters of North Carolina gave Senator Graham 53,000 votes more than they gave Mr. Smith. In the second primary, Mr. Smith virtually dropped the business of fighting the national Administration. All we heard down here was talk of "Southern Democracy." There was a great flood of propaganda pamphlets intended to stir up racial feeling, and successful in doing so.

No, it was not anti-Administration feeling that upset Senator Graham. It was that old bugaboo of Southern politics: the white man's feeling that the Negro is inferior and should be kept in his place. For many of these white men, Senator Graham believed too much in giving the Negro an even break. Many of us (there were by actual count 260,000 at the polls) believe that Senator Graham has the right approach to this problem.

Since the primary, there has been a strenuous effort by those who supported Mr. Smith to minimize the part played by the racial stir-up. Your editorial, whether by inadvertence or otherwise, helped somewhat in this whitewash attempt. There were, of course, anti-Administration forces in the Smith camp, and they made up a substantial part of his following. The Smith people realized, however, that they could not win without an emotional flareup on the race question. It should be faced openly as the true cause of Senator Graham's defeat.

Germany In The Schuman Plan

There is little in the proposal to pool German steel and coal that has not been suggested before, sometimes under peculiar auspices.

For example, the proposal to merge the Ruhr and surrounding areas is not new. In fact it was Section 2 (c) of the original Morgenthau Plan in 1943: "An International Zone should be created containing the Ruhr and the surrounding industrial areas."

It was repeated by the French government in a plan published in the New York Times, February 5, 1947.

The overall objective of that 1947 plan is clearly stated in the French memorandum, which might well form, for all we know, the basis of 1950 French policy regarding the Ruhr. That objective is: "(a) To limit the production of steel, mechanical and chemical plants to the figure agreed upon by the Allied Powers; (b) to develop to the maximum extent possible the exploitation of the coal mines of the Ruhr and to assure the division of this production in acordance with the needs of European industry."

The French memorandum of 1947 thus weakens the argument of those Americans who favor the steel pool as a means of raising general production, and living standards. The French government clearly aimed in 1947 at curtailing as much as possible the production of steel, of machinery, and of chemical, which compete with French products, while developing German coal production for export. Increased shipments of Ruhr coal to France were to form the basis of a new French steel and machinery industry to replace the one arbitrarily dismantled in the Ruhr and elsewhere in Germany.

The French may have improved their plan, or their presentation of it, since 1947. But there is cause for doubt. In the new French scheme, "steel and coal" are mentioned, but iron is not.

United States News and World Report states in its issue of May 26 quite flat-footedly that France is not throwing its iron-ore into the pool: "France . . . does not plan to put her iron-ore deposits of Lorraine into the merger."

This oversight, if intentional, would have the effect of giving French industry special buying privileges in Germany for coal without compensating Germany as far as its needed purchases of French iron are concerned.

As everyone knows, German coal and French iron are sold under a system of dual pricing. The French plan would apparently end dual pricing in Germany but allow it to continue in France. A rather one-sided bargain, on the looks of it!

All these possibilities should be looked into, and the United States should be given assurance of fair play for the Germans, before the Administration continues to indorse and support the plan. After all, we're footing the bills in Germany.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

The Alternative

THE WHOLE momentous meaning of President Truman's decision to meet force with force in Korea can be grasped only in the light of what would surely have happened if he had decided otherwise. For there could be no doubt that the aggression in Korea was planned as only the first of a whole series of demonstrations of Russian strength and Western weakness, designed to lead to the crumbling of the Western will to resist.

Certain events in Iran, in the days immediately preceding the attack on Korea, suggest how the weak spots in the Western defenses would have been exploited. Less than a week before the Korean puppets were given the signal to march, the Soviet Ambassador in Teheran appeared at the Iranian Foreign Office. Brusquely, he handed the Iranian Foreign Minister a toughly worded protest, and departed.

The Soviet protest recalled the 1921 Soviet-Iranian treaty. It charged that in permitting a "hostile power" — the United States—to use Iran as a "base for agression," Iran was violating the treaty. And it reminded the Iranians that such a "violation" gave the Soviet Union the right to enter Iran in order to expel the "hostile power."

This was only the culminating point in a long campaign of pressure on Iran. For weeks, the clandestine Tudeh (Communist) Party, liberally financed by the Soviet Embassy, had been working with renewed energy to undermine the tottering structure of the state. And for weeks, the "free Iranian movement," using radio transmitters mounted on railroad cars along the Russian border, had been denouncing the Iranian government and the "imperialist" United States, and promising "liberation" soon.

IRAN IS ONE SIDE of the medal. If the United States had failed to act in Korea, or if American action had been confined to handwringing protests, it might never have been necessary for the Kremlin even to send into Iran appropriately costumed "free Iranian" forces in order to bring about Iran's capitulation. With only a little extra pressure, the corrupt, frightened Iranian government, the lesson of South Korea well learned, would almost certainly have begged for the best terms it could get.

And what would have happened in Iran would have happened in one form or another at other weak spots around the Soviet periphery, notably in Burma (where the British momentarily expected a Chinese Communist attack after the Korean attack), in Tibet, throughout the Middle East, and in Greece. For the way in which such demonstrations of Soviet strength and Western weakness would have been exploited, it is only necessary to turn to Germany.

After the Korean invasion, and before Truman announced the decision to resist, the reaction in the Soviet zone in Germany was automatic, and almost certainly prearranged. The Communist press immediately drew the parallel between divided Korea and divided Germany; warned that "today the powers of peace are already stronger than the forces of war"; and predicted "a tremendous victory for the peace front over the American warmongers." Soviet Zone President Wilhelm Pieck, repeating the transparent lie that the Korean fighting was instigated by this country, warned: "Should an attack by the West be tried here, the people of the Soviet Zone republican would rally to the defense of peace at the side of the U. S. S. R."

This sort of thing must of course be translated from the Communese. But the translation is not difficult. It amounts to this: "Let the Western Germans, and all Western Europeans, be warned that sooner or later the fate of the Southern Koreans awaits you, unless you surrender on Soviet terms." And as Western Europenas are fully aware, the Soviets are building an army in East Germany, armed with much the same weapons, including tanks and divisional artillery, as the Northern Koreans.

WESTERN GERMANY and Western Europe, which remain the Kremlin's paramount objectives, would not of course have capitulated immediately. But as one demonstration of Western weakness followed another around the Soviet periphery, a mood of appeasement and surrender would certainly have been induced in the major western nations, while the Soviets themselves, emboldered by their success in Korea, became increasingly arrogant. Indeed, even in the three days between the attack and Truman's decision, there were visible signs that sensible Western Europeans were taking Pieck's warnings to heart.

Now, by contrast, the non-Soviet world has never been more united, the spirit of resistance to Soviet aggression has never been stronger than it is today. So much has courage accomplished at one stroke. There are still dark and menacing dangers ahead. But whatever lies ahead, it cannot but be better than the rapid crumbling of the defenses of the free world, which the Kremlin certainly anticipated, and which would surely have followed American appeasement in Korea.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Pawns And The King

AS YET there is nothing to indicate that in the Korean affair the USSR has departed from the basic line of its policy, which has been to expand the Communist sphere by the use of satellites without committing and engaging its own armed forces. It has sent forward only the pawns. It has guarded the king.

Lippmann

Since VJ-Day in 1945 there has been much fighting around the periphery of the Soviet orbit and for the purpose of enlarging that orbit. But in none of the theaters of conflict—in Greece in China, in Indo-China, in Malaya, in Burma, in the Philippines, in Korea—have the organized military forces of the USSR as yet been involved directly. All these wars have been civil or colonial wars. In none have the Soviet forces engaged in open combat with the local forces. The Soviet Union, though indubitably it has intervened, has nevertheless contrived to have the active fighting done by Greeks against Greeks, by Chinese against Chinese, or by Asiatics against Europeans.

ADHERING to its rule of avoiding direct commitment of Soviet forces, the Kremlin has not been able to carry out every project of expansion. Satellite forces are not always reliable and effective. Thus while in China there has been a resounding success, in Greece and the Balkans the Kremlin has had a setback.

Yet win or lose, the rule has had enormous advantages: by not engaging its own forces, the Soviet Union is reasonably insured against a world war; by not engaging its own forces, its own prestige is not totally committed in any local adventure. Without losing face it can allow the Greek guerillas to be defeated and it could have waited a much longer time—and probably expected to wait—before Mao was victorious.

It has been a policy quite different from Hitler's—a policy of very shrewdly calculated risks. The Soviets have acted under a rule of policy by which the profits can be very big though the losses are limited.

UNTIL last week the United States had also been able to conduct the struggle without committing its own forces directly. Though the British have been engaged directly in Malaya, the French—at great cost—in Indo-China, we, at least, were not. In Europe, including the Balkans and Turkey, no satellite or subversive forces have been able without support of the Red Army to expand the sphere of communism. The national forces, with help but without armed intervention, have proved to be adequate. The one apparent exception, Czechoslovakia, is not really an exception in view of the fact that it was virtually surrounded by the Red Army and could not possibly have been helped effectively by the West.

But on the mainland of eastern Asia the position has proved to be fundamentally different. Even with arms and supplies and military advisers the native anti-Communist forces would be beaten by the native Communist forces in Indo-China and in Korea as they were beaten in China. The anti-Communist forces, as such, are not able to win the civil wars. The only way to prevent them from losing the civil wars completely has been to engage non-Asiatic forces—French, British, and now American.

IT IS necessary to keep our heads very clear and very cool. The decision taken this week was necessary and it was right. But it is not a triumph—far from it—to be fighting Koreans while the Soviet Union remains in a position to take a profit from our losses and to lose very little by our gain.

The three leading powers in the Atlantic community—on whom depend the defense and reconstruction of Western civilization—are now fighting Annamites, Malayans, and Koreans, and soon they may be fighting Chinese. They are fighting them in eastern Asia very far from the main centers of the Atlantic community, and very far from the main centers of the Soviet orbit.

The French army is deeply engaged in this eastern struggle, so deeply that the bulk of its regular officers and the best of its regular troops are not available for the defense of Europe. It would be an incalculably great Soviet success if the United States were to become involved and pinned down in a long, bloody, expensive, indecisive struggle on the Asiatic mainland with the Chinese-Korean forces.

IT SHOULD BE, it seems to me, a cardinal rule of United States policy that at least as long as Soviet forces are not committed in any of these borderland struggles, we shall retain mobility and freedom for our own military forces. We must remember that our power is on the sea and in the air, and that we must not commit our meager infantry forces on distant beachheads, thus engaging large elements of our power in theaters that are not of our own choosing and where no decision can ever be had.

June Weather Is Marked by Tame Record

Well, we believe in being fair with the reader right from the outset. So here's telling you: This is going to be a dull story. You can always turn to Page 1 or the sports section.

Can we help it if there were no tornadoes, typhoons or 60 record-breaking days in June? After all, we don't make the weather.

June was a shamefully average month, according to figures released yesterday by the weatherman.

Average maximum was 83.1, minimum 64.7 and mean 73.9. Normals are 81.8, 62.7 and 72.2.

Disgustingly normal, wasn't it?

Four days were 90 or above. Normal: Five days.

Rain fell in measurable amounts on nine days. Normal: 11. We got two thunderstorms; June usually produces six.

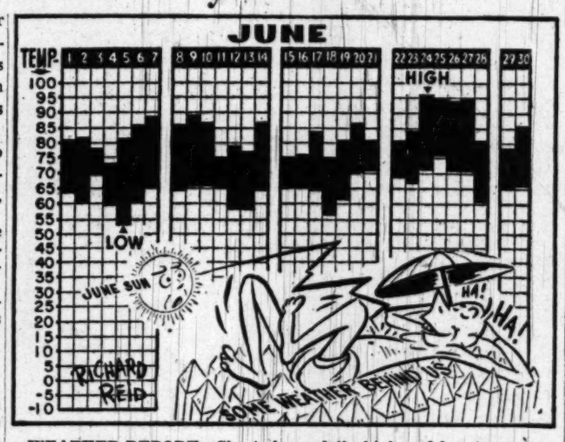
June gave us 3.14 inches of rain. Normal: 4.13.

We got 69 percent of the possible sunshine, normal being 63. In aggregate, there were 306 hours and 19 minutes of sunshine out of a possible 445 hours, 50 minutes.

There were 14 clear days, 6 partly cloudy, 10 cloudy. In an average June, it's 10 clear, 12 partly cloudy, 8 cloudy.

Hottest day was 96 on June 24. Best minimum was 53 on June 5. Maximum wind velocity was 31 miles an hour on the 10th and 17th. Average hour velocity was 9.5, usual being 6.3. Prevailing wind direction: southerly. Usual prevailing wind direction: southerly.

Delightfully dull, hey?



WEATHER REPORT—Chart shows daily high and low temperatures for June, which indicate that June was just an average month with the only item of note being the 96-degree heat registered June 24. High temperature for the first day was 81 degrees and the low, 63; the last day's high was 86 degrees and the low, 66

45,000 Scouts Light Candles In Dramatic Religious Rites

Valley Forge, Pa., July 2 (U.P.).—More than 45,000 boys and young men simultaneously lighted candles tonight at the second National Boy Scout Jamboree in tribute to the American heritage of freedom of worship.

The impressive spectacle, pinpointing with flames some 20 acres of the vast encampment, highlighted the "Scout's own" convocation with services by representatives of four faiths.

Scout actors presented five tableaux depicting the rise of religious liberty in America, beginning with the story of Roger Wiliams of Rhode Island and concluding with Lincoln's Gettysburg address.

Leading the services were Methodist Bishop Richard C. Raines, Indianapolis; the Rev. George M. Dowd, Boston, national director of the Catholic Committee on Scouting; Rabbi Aryeh Lev, New York Jewish chaplain-general of the Jamboree, and Mormon Elder Ezra T. Benson, Salt Lake City.

The Scouts and leaders from every State and 18 foreign nations lined the rolling hills around the same huge arena where President Truman opened the Jamboree Friday night.

Athletics Cuff Kuzava, Whip Nats Again, 7-4

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

NOW IT DEVELOPS that whether the Philadelphia Athletics will be sold is not for President Connie Mack to say. There is so much tugging and hauling within the club's official family, Mr. Mack can be outvoted in his own organization and after 50 years could find himself bereft of a ball team before another season sets in.

The latest facet of the Philadelphia story is the admission by sons Roy and Earle that the sale of the team is under consideration. It isn't what Mr. Mack wants, but there are now 10 owners of the A's and his one-time voting control has been fragmented by his own generosity.

POVICH

The kin of his former partner, the late Thomas Shibe, own 42 percent of the A's. Mr. Mack and his three sons own 14½ percent each following his act a few years back of splitting his stock among them. Connie, jr., youngest of the sons, and by Mr. Mack's second marriage, is the one who wants to sell.

Young Connie has thrown his support to the Shibe-McFarland faction. Benny McFarland, secretary of the club, is the husband of a Shibe, and is eager to unload the franchise at a profit.

THE FIRST PRICE mentioned was five million dollars which was promptly, and properly laughed off. The bidding for the A's franchise may, in fact, be something less than frantic. The club is deep in seventh place, is getting old, and is running a sorry second to the amazing Phillies in customer appeal.

Bill Veeck, the old baseball prospector, who was mentioned as one of the bidders for the A's franchise, promptly denied that he was in the market for Mack's team. And in picturesque language.

"Me buy the A's?" queried Veeck. "All I'd be buying is Jimmy Dykes, Mickey Cochrane and a ball park."

The decline of the Athletics has been going on for years now. Since Mack divided his stock, the heirs have been voting themselves big dividends at the end of each season instead of ploughing money back into the build-up of the team. Low-operating costs, including a skeleton farm system, made the dividends possible.

THE PINCH was being felt, though, this season. When the A's bought Bob Dillinger from the Browns for $100,000 they had to dip into their building fund for the dough. Some day, Mr. Mack envisioned that he would have a completely-closed in park like Briggs Stadium, and for years the building fund was untouched.

Otherwise the club had been feeling no financial pinch. Until they bought Pitcher Bob Hooper and Shortstop Kermit Wahl for $25,000 each this year, the A's were getting their ball players cheaply. First Baseman Ferris Fain was a $10,000 draftee from the coast. Elmer Valo they got from their Wilmington farm team for a car token. Shortstop Eddie Joost was a draftee. Peter Suder grew up in the organization, and Billy Hitchcock came on waivers.

Sam Chapman they signed as a free agent when $10,000 was a lot of money. Wally Moses they picked up for nothing. Pitchers Shantz, Brissie and Sheib were home-grown. The A's rarely went into the big markets and for the past few years they've been getting 10 cents a head from the Phillies admissions for the rent of Shibe Park.

THIS YEAR the A's have been averaging only 7300 fans per game at home, which isn't enough; would total only little more than a half million for the season. There will be no dividends this season, and the losses may be heavy. Cash offers are looking attractive to the McFarlands and young Connie.

There was pressure on Mr. Mack to sell Ferris Fain to the Tigers this year, so the club could get off the nut, but he resisted it. They were trying to sell the player Mr. Mack is most fond of. If he stays in the baseball business another year by some happy compromise of the two factions, he's going to tear his team up, he says.

"I'm going to tear up my whole infield except for Fain," he is reported to have said while in Washington this week. "We'll have a lot of new faces, I hope." Among his other hopes is that he will still have a team to be president of, if you'll pardon this near-ending of a sentence with a preposition.

Middlecoff's 66-133 Puts Him Stroke Ahead Over Mangrum

Detroit, July 2 (AP).—Dr. Cary Middlecoff, the touring dentist from Ormond Beach, Fla., posted a 133 to take a one-stroke lead at the midway point of the Motor City Open golf tournament today.

Middlecoff chalked up a blistering 66—six under par—over the Red Run Country Club course today. But he was far from alone in that achievement as five others did likewise in the second round of the 72-hole tournament.

Middlecoff's sub-par round gave him a one-stroke lead over Lloyd Mangrum of Chicago who settled for co-champion honors with him in the 1949 tournament.

The two tied at 273 last year and then played an 11-hole sudden death playoff before darkness halted play and left them co-champions.

Today's round, played partly during showery weather, saw 36 of the 168-man field better par of 72 while 12 others tied it. National Open Champion Ben Hogan, who had 67 yesterday, ran into trap trouble and had to settle for a 73-140, seven strokes off the pace.

Jack Burke, jr., of White Plains, N. Y., another big favorite with the gallery, also cooled off a bit as he had a 70 to follow up his opening day 66.

Tigers Split With Tribe; Bob Feller Wins 200th

Cleveland, July 2 (AP).—Bob Feller pitched his 200th major-league victory today as the Cleveland Indians won the second game of a doubleheader with Detroit, 5-3.

Detroit won the first game, 8-5, for the Tigers' only victory in a four-game series.

The split with the league leaders dropped Cleveland to third place, behind New York, which defeated Boston.

Feller got help in the last inning when the Tigers had two on and one out. Al Benton relieved the former fireball king and snuffed out the rally before a run was scored.

The win makes Feller the only player active in the major league who has reached the two century mark. Since the turn of the century, 31 others have reached that goal.

All the Cleveland runs came in the sixth, when Luke Easter banged out his second home run of the day with two on base, Ray Boone, who doubled, and Jim Hegan, who singled, had scored before Easter came to bat.

Al Rosen hit his twenty-fourth home run of the season for Cleveland in the first game. The inside-the-park four-bagger tied him with Boston's Ted Williams for the league leadership.

Begins New Role Against Nats

Yanks Shift DiMag to 1st Base Today

Boston, July 2 (AP).—Joe DiMaggio, New York Yankee centerfielder since 1936, will start playing first base tomorrow, Manager Casey Stengel said today.

DiMaggio worked out at first before today's game with the Boston Red Sox. Stengel said the 35-year-old star will open there in tomorrow's game at Washington.

Stengel indicated that the failing fortunes of the Yankees have forced the move. Before today's game, they had lost nine of their last 12 contests.

The Yankee manager also said he plans dropping DiMaggio from fourth to fifth in the batting order. Joe has been hovering around the .260 mark the last few weeks, well below his lifetime average.

"It was my idea," Stengel said. "I asked him to try first base for the good of the team. It has been a sore spot all season and so has the outfield. Joe agreed."

DiMaggio has batted cleanup ever since he replaced the late Lou Gehrig as No. 4 hitter in 1939.

"We've been beaten too often by left handers lately," Stengel said, "and one of the ways they do it is by walking DiMaggio (a righthand batter) to pitch to Yogi Berra (left handed) I'm thinking of splitting them up, with Berra hitting third, Hank Bauer fourth and DiMag fifth."

The Yankee star looked capable enough in practice at first and will carry the experiment into the Washington series, at least, Stengel indicated. Joe has never played anything but outfield in his 15-year major league career but did appear as an infielder, in three games, for the San Francisco Seals of the Pacific Coast League. That was in 1932, when he was signed as a shortstop at the age of 17.

The installation of DiMaggio at first base means the end of the trail for another veteran, Johnny Mize. At least, Stengel implied that today, "I can't carry four first basemen," he pointed out. "I've got to keep Tommy Henrich and hope that he can help us with his pinch hitting. And I'm holding on to Joe Collins, who can help out as a pinch-hitter and runner and as an outfield spare."

ANOTHER RUN FOR THE A'S—Bob Dillinger, Philadelphia Athletics third baseman, crosses home with the third run of the Mackmen's five-run third inning yesterday against the Nats. Dillinger scored when Mickey Vernon threw late to home plate after fielding Paul Lehner's grounder. Al Evans is waiting for the ball as Dillinger checks in. That's Pitcher Bob Kuzava on one knee watching the action. The A's won, 7-4

Yanks Sock Bosox, 15-9; Hit 3 Homers

Boston, July 2 (AP).—Joe DiMaggio, Yogi Berra and Johnny Mize clouted homers as the drooping New York Yankees scored a 15-9 triumph over the Boston Red Sox today.

Berra's four-bagger, with two aboard, was hit off starter Ellis Kinder during a five-run outburst in the fourth inning. DiMaggio's seventeenth, with one on base, and Mize's clout into the right-field bullpen were made against Al Papai in the fifth.

For the world champions it was only their fourth victory in their last 13 starts.

The Yankees collected 13 hits off four Boston hurlers, and the Bosox matched that total against Allie Reynolds and Lefty Joe Page, who came in with the bases loaded and none out in the ninth.

Four runners came in before Page could wind up the game by striking out pinchhitter Clyde Vollmer.

Catcher Birdie Tebbetts collected four of the Red Sox blows, including his sixth homer.

Big Walt Dropo connected safely twice and drove in a pair of runs that boosted his total in that department to 79, only two less than teammate Ted Williams' major-leagues' high.

Loss Drops Griffs Into Tie for 5th With Chisox

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

The A's had it yesterday, a pitching team of Bob Hooper and Lou Brissie, who restrained the Nats to seven hits and dropped 'em kerplunk into a tie for fifth place in the American League vital statistics.

The score of the Nats' latest indignity at the hands of the seventh-place Athletics was 7-4, and the losing pitcher was Bob Kuzava, who yielded all of the A's runs in the first four innings.

When the Nats made motions as if to get tough, finally, with Rookie Hooper, Connie Mack threw Brissie at 'em in the last three innings. Unbothered by his war wounds or the fact that he was making his eighth appearance in the A's last 13 games, Brissie allowed no runs.

Brissie Stops Nats Cold

In fact, the only hit he yielded was a drooping bat-handle single by Eddie Yost at the start of the ninth. With two out, he walked Mickey Vernon, but Sam Mele answered the customers' appeal for a game-tying home run by grounding to third base for a game-ending force play.

The A's scored five of their runs against Kuzava in the messiest third inning witnessed in years at Griffith Stadium.

The Nats were throwing the ball around as if it were radioactive, and by the end of the fourth inning they had tossed four errors into the proceedings.

Kuzava wasn't sharp on the mound, though. The A's conked him for eight of their eleven hits in the four innings he lasted. His chief value, in fact, was represented by his bat. He beat out an inside-the-park home run for the Nats' first score.

Joe Haynes and Rookie Bobby Ross pitched the last five innings and shut the A's out, but Hooper and Brissie were keeping the Nats well-contained at that point.

Kuzava invited most of his distress in the A's five-run third inning. Dillinger singled to left with one out and then he walked Valo. Then he tried to pick Dillinger off second and found nobody covering the bag. His throw went into short center and Dillinger went into third.

Mickey Vernon piled up more trouble for the Nats when he took Lehner's grounder and made a tardy throw to the plate. Everybody was safe with Dillinger scoring. Chapman singled Valo home, and a bit later Denter fumbled Fain's double-play grounder and Lehner scored. Joost grounded to Combs and on a try for a Combs-to-Dente-to-Vernon double play, everybody was safe, Chapman scoring.

Phils Beat Dodgers, 6-4; Munger Hero as Cards Win

Hurler Bats in First Run, Scores 2d in 2-1 Game

St. Louis, July 2 (AP).—Pitcher George Munger batted in the Cardinals' first run, then scored the winning tally as the St. Louis club nosed out the Pittsburgh Pirates, 2 to 1, today.

Ralph Kiner homered in the eighth with the sacks empty for the lone Pittsburgh run.

Munger worked his way out of trouble several times until the seventh, when, with one man on, he left the game with an upset stomach. Al Brazle relieved him.

Kiner's homer was off Brazle. The only other hit the Pirates got off Brazle was a single in the ninth. He also walked one.

2d Called, 8-8; Nicholson's Pinch Homer Wins First

Philadelphia, July 2 (AP).—Pee Wee Reese's home run with one on in the ninth inning tied the score as the Brooklyn Dodgers and Philadelphia Phils today battled to an 8-8 deadlock in the nightcap of a doubleheader called at the end of ten innings by Sunday curfew.

The Phils won the opener 6-4 on Bill Nicholson's pinch hit homer with one on in the eighth to retain first place.

The loss in the opener was Brooklyn's fourth straight and sixth setback in seven games.

Under National League rules, since the second game went over nine innings before curfew ended it, the entire game must be replayed.

This differs from the Pittsburgh-Brooklyn game last Saturday, which was called before nine innings were played and will be completed as a late date.

Scarborough Wins Eighth, Chicago Splits With Browns

Bill Bennings . . .

AT CHARLES TOWN.

DEAR FOLKS:

The experiment of starting 10 horses instead of the usual eight worked well on the opening-day card. The jockeys have been warned that no rough or careless riding will be tolerated, and Chief Steward Andrew R. (Snooks) Winters was pleased with the way they handled themselves.

Jockey J. C. Lauer lost his apprenticeship when he rode his fortieth winner aboard Weatherman in Saturday's feature race. He is a good boy and should have little trouble swinging into action as a journeyman rider. Apprentice G. Gardner, who rides for Trainer C. A. Cranford of Washington, is not a novice. He rode several winners on the West Coast before coming East last winter.

Favorites got off to a pretty good start on the weekend show. Business should pick up here with the closing of Delaware Park on July Fourth. See you on the rail.—BILL.

Circus Rose Leads Show

By Harry DeMawby, jr.

Culpeper, Va., July 2.—Hi Rock Farms' Circus Rose paved the way to pony jumper laurels by winning three straight classes at the first session of the forty-sixth annual show of the Culpeper Horse Show and Racing Association here today.

Circus Rose, one of the trio of circus horses owned by William E. Schlusemeyer of Warrenton, Va., was ridden by Joe Green to win in the large warm-up class and also the last class of the three-day modified Olympic events and the knockdown-and-out which finished with darkness closing in.

Three classes on the Working Hunter schedule were run in the first session, with a wide-open race for the championship honors resulting, as Col. and Mrs. H. H. Pohl's Fitzrada, ridden by Jane Pohl Rust of Leesburg, Va., chalked up a place in the three-day working event, a third in the Hack, and fourth in the Ladies' Hunter class for a five-point tally. This tied Mrs. James C. Hamilton's Mountain Briar.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Haggin Parry's Watch Me scored three blues under the capable saddle work of Ann Everett Yoe, in the Pony Hack, Pony Hunter and Pony Hunter Hacks.

Dunham Rallies to Beat McCarthy for Parks Tennis Title

Frank Wins 3d Straight Title In 3½-Hour, Five-Set Match

By Gordon Beard

Defending Champion Frank Dunham had to come from behind to capture the men's singles title in the National Capital Public Parks Tennis Tourney at 16th and Kennedy sts. nw. yesterday, defeating Jack McCarthy in a 3½-hour struggle, 1—6, 7—5, 9—7, 1—6, 6—1.

Dunham won his third consecutive crown by staving off McCarthy's set point once in the second set and four times in the third.

Trailing 15-40 in the tenth game of the second set and behind 4-5 in games, Dunham rallied for four straight points to tie the set, 5-5. Then he broke McCarthy's service and held his own to tie the match at one set apiece.

Second-seeded McCarthy missed his greatest chance in the third set, losing after piling up a 5-2 lead. Twice in each the eighth and tenth games the loser muffed set point chances. Dunham capitalized on the breaks to win seven of the last nine games.

After McCarthy won the fourth set to tie the match, Dunham came back strong in the deciding set. The winner alowed only four points in the first four games and jumped into a 5-0 lead.

In the mixed doubles finals, Willie and George Herbert won over Socie Girgosian and Dick Leighton, 8—6, 6—1. The title was Mrs. Herbert's third in two days, having won the women's singles and doubles Saturday.

Sterling Wins

Sterling Insurance Company's Softball team beat Bethesda Naval Hospital 16-3 yesterday at Chevy Chase playground behind three-hit pitching by Fred Crammer.

British Open Starts Today

Troon, Scotland, July 2 (AP).—Bull shouldered Jimmy McHale, a Californian transplanted to Philadelphia, looks like the American long shot most likely to lift the British Open crown from South African Bobby Locke.

McHale, a former pro now restored to simon pure status, and Professional Johnny Bulla from Pittsburgh, motored down to neighboring Prestwick this afternoon for a four-ball practice round with a couple of local amateurs.

Frank Stranahan, the Toledo, Ohio, boy who has just won the British Amateur Championship for the second time, cast the dull cares of golf behind him and slipped off to Glasgow for a movie.

Locke was a four to one favorite to carry off the title

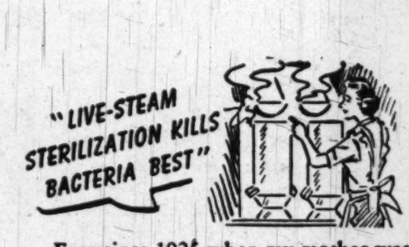
Number 4 of a Series

"I'm cooking on the front burner, Commissioner, so that everyone can see what steam sterilization means!"

I'm a young mother, Commissioner, and I don't know much about affairs of State, but . . . when you talk about steam sterilization of our District milk, you've landed right in my own backyard.

Take this baby bottle sterilizer the doctor advised me to get. It's the same idea as used for sterilization of instruments in hospitals or for milk-handling equipment on dairy farms. Boil the water and presto . . . live steam kills harmful bacteria on the baby's bottles in a few minutes. Simple, yes, but so vitally important to my baby's health, and to our community's health.



Ever since 1925 when my mother was learning the Charleston, I've been drinking the cleanest, sweetest, purest milk on earth. You see, the Health Officer forced every farm supplying the District from that time forward to sterilize every milk pail, milk can, and other utensil with live steam in a sterilizing cabinet like that shown above.

Now here's something to really make you sit up and take notice. The average price of home delivered milk in the District during 1949 was 20.8 cents per quart. The average for 56 cities across the country was 21.1 cents. You get the best for less.

But now we mothers know you gentlemen of the Commission are faced with a serious decision which really seems very simple to us. There's plenty of clean, sweet, pure milk from our District inspected dairy farms to fill all our District needs and at the right price. There's no need to continue the temporary laxity, particularly in regard to sterilization since no local shortage exists.

On July 10, a hearing will be held by the District Commissioners on the subject of making permanent chemical sterilization. The members of this association of dairy farmers are glad to keep steam sterilization and continue to give you the best milk in the world. They can't keep it if this double-health-standard is allowed in the District milk supply.

You Can Help

We hope you will go to this hearing, or get your church or club to send a representative. The Commissioners are interested in our babies' welfare. Let them know that sweet, clean, pure milk is of vital interest to you and yours.

Area Engineer Students Favor Private Jobs 6-1 Over U. S. Employment

Government service isn't attractive to most of the engineering students at four universities here. The students voted, 6 to 1, in favor of jobs in private industry.

These are the reasons, in order, why they ranked private industry as a better place to work: (1) Quicker advancement in private industry; (2) regimentation and lack of individual incentive in Government jobs; (3) low Government salaries; (4) little opportunity for training in Government; (5) opposition to Government in business, and (6) general dislike of Government work, civil service, red tape, and politics.

A total of 614 junior and senior students were polled at Catholic, George Washington and Howard Universities and the University of Maryland. Central Surveys, Inc., of Shenandoah, Iowa, conducted the study.

RFC: It's a headless agency. In fact, some people have doubts if it can legally conduct business. Here's why:

The terms of all five members of the board of directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation expired at midnight last Friday. The President, in addition, hasn't recommended a new slate of directors to the Senate for confirmation. The situation could produce all sorts of legal problems.

The Justice Department is reported to have rendered a weekend opinion that the RFC directors could continue to serve. It hopes the question is never raised, however.

Meantime, the President doesn't want to fill the RFC board jobs until Congress disposes of his plan to transfer RFC to Commerce. In any event, the Senate opposition to RFC and its lending policies is likely to lead to three new RFC directors.

RIDER: The Federation of American Scientists has come out strongly against the House-approved rider to give the Commerce Secretary broad power to fire his employes summarily on security grounds. Its position:

"This rider is an undeserved threat to the employes of a Federal department. We have concluded that it serves no useful purpose and is in fact unnecessary. It is another link in the chain to remove Civil Service safeguards for employes. There may be some need of arbitrary powers for dealing with security risks in defense or 'sensitive' agencies, but not in a civilian, 'nonsensitive' agency.

"Arbitrary laws governing security risks during World War II were limited to defense agencies. In 1947, the State Department was given similar powers. This year an effort is being made to include the Commerce Department. If this psychology continues, such arbitrariness will spread to the whole Government service and a basic feature of the Civil Service system will have been abrogated."

FCC: At Federal Communications, Jack Werner has been promoted to chief of the Common Carrier Division, and Curtis M. Bushnell has been made its assistant chief. Robert E. Stromberg succeeds Bushnell as chief of the telephone division. Edwin L. White has been appointed chief of the new Safety Special Radio Services Bureau. He has been with FCC since 1930. Retiring from FCC are Robert T. Hoskinson, an accountant with nearly 45 years of Federal service, and Frank L. Tracy, another accountant, with 21 years of service.

NOTES: Henry Iler appears to be squaring off with James Yaden for control of the AFL's American Federation of Government Employes. He's chairman of the Employes' Compensation appeals board, and Yaden has been AFGE president for the past two years. ... Jerre Mangione is a former Government press agent who has made good in the literary field. He has written another fine book, Reunion in Sicily. He was formerly in the Justice Department ... Malcolm A. Burrows has been appointed loan guaranty officer at VA's regional office here. He succeeds Herbert W. Grambow, who moved up to chief of the new property management division ... At Government Printing, John W. Reid, a proofreader, has been given a cash award for a work-saving suggestion ... James K. Knudson, the newest member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, is a former missionary for the Mormon Church.

In the District Mrs. Helen McDormand, 43, of 2025 Luzerne ave., Silver Spring, suffered a possible fracture of the hip about noon when the car driven by her husband, Alfred, was struck by another car at 16th and Underwood sts. nw., police said.

Perfect for a Holiday—Sun, River, Trees . . .

THE LONG WEEKEND—With a fine day to set the tone for the July 4 weekend, Washingtonians yesterday made for the parks for sunbathing and picnicking. At Hains Point the crowd gathered in sun and shade, to read and have lunch, to rest and talk

Kansas State Alumni Take 'Pot Luck'

There was a real, old-fashioned Kansas "pot luck" picnic supper Saturday night at Palisades Park—but the food came from Washington, Virginia and Maryland kitchens.

The knife and fork wielders were about 50 Washington area alumni and alumnae of Kansas State College and their families—who know good food when they cook it, see it and eat it, as they definitely did Saturday night.

The Kansas system was adjusted to the geographical conditions of the Washington area by Luke M. Schruben, 4606 De Russey pkwy., Chevy Chase, Md., Kansas State '33 and president of the alumni group, and by Ralph W. Sherman, 1713 Luzerne ave., Silver Spring, Md., class of '24, secretary-treasurer of the group.

As Sherman explained it, each one brought a covered dish containing enough hot food for his or her family, plus two more persons, as well as beverages and utensils. In addition, Virginia residents brought dessert. Maryland residents brought rolls, butter and appetizers—for two and one half families.

There was more than enough to eat—though one helping of dessert was the rule of the evening, because Virginians were in the minority.

That was just as well, after the consumption of large quantities of fried chicken, baked beans and a number of other staples in covered dishes.

After the picnic, the Kansas Staters divided into athletes and reminiscers.

Zoo, Parks Lure Those Who Stayed In District

Crowds Turn Out To Watch Smokey, Famed Cub Bear; Highways Jammed

All roads yesterday led to the beaches, the parks or to the cage of a little brown bear at the Zoo.

It was a day in which the sun shone and the temperature hovered in the upper 80s.

Washington residents sweating it out in town over the long holiday weekend went to beaches, pools or parks for a picnic. Some just lazed at home.

They left the city's hot streets, its museums, art galleries and shrines to out-of-town visitors.

The Zoo did a rushing business. A crowd estimated at nearly 5000 wandered through the hilly park, stopped and watched the animals in their out-of-door cages.

Lines stood four and five deep to see Smokey—the singed three-month-old bear cub who took up Zoo residence Friday.

Zoo police were kept busy directing visitors to his cage above the Reptile House.

"If one person has asked me where Smokey is, a thousand have," said one policeman.

Heavy Traffic Reported

Police at Drum Point and Cove Point beaches near Solomons, Md., and at West River near Annapolis reported heavy streams of morning and late afternoon traffic.

Washington cars were parked double along the streets of Colonial Beach, Va.

Traffic on highways, both north and south of Washington, was reported "heavier than usual for a holiday."

Park police found every picnic table taken in Rock Creek, Potomac and Dupont parks. Families spread blankets on the grass near the Potomac River seawall for a summer Sunday's feast of fried chicken, potato salad, olives and iced tea.

The sun worshipers napped or from behind dark glasses read while soaking up the rays on "Rock Creek Beach" just off the parkway at the P st. bridge.

Glen Echo Park had the "biggest day of the season" with a crowd of 15,000. The swimming pool was at capacity with little more than "standing room only" for 4500 paid admissions.

City Pools Half Filled

City pools were only half-filled. East Potomac Park which a year ago had 3000 swimmers yesterday had a total of 900.

The Potomac River was calm and canoeists took advantage of excellent boating weather. Dempsey's Boathouse, too, had its busiest time of the year with all boats rented out for the day.

For today the Weather Bureau forecasts a warm but cloudy day with possible thundershowers. The Fourth will be fair and warm with a chance of a thunderstorm.

The city's celebration of the Fourth will be climaxed Tuesday night with a Sesquicentennial celebration spectacle, "Salute to Independence," on the Monument Grounds.

The program will begin at 7:30 p. m. with a concert by the Army, Navy and Marine bands. John Foster Dulles, special consultant to the State Department, will give the patriotic address.

Baritone Roy Roberts will sing with the 120-voice Sesquicentennial Chorus. There also will be a balancing act, dances by the National Ballet, singing cowboys and a fireworks display.

Hearings Show Fairfax Wants Change in Governing Setup

By William H. Smith
Post Reporter

With completion of the first stage in its study of Fairfax County's administration, a 21-member special commission is confronted with an overwhelming sentiment for a change in the county's form of government.

Six public hearings for residents of the county's six magisterial districts have produced an almost unanimous opposition to the present governmental system, and strong support of the county manager plan.

A petition for a direct change-over to the county manager plan has been filed with the Circuit Court, but no date has been set for a referendum—mandatory as a result of the filing. According to best estimate, the vote will be held in November at the general election.

With the series of public hearings comprising the first phase of the study over, the commission now plans to sponsor a series of conferences between its executive committee and country-wide organizations. Following these meetings, the entire commssion will meet in executive session to study the data that will have been obtined in previous sessions.

In hearings before the commission, the county manager form of government had drawn strong support from a number of county organizations. In contrast, individuals only have come to the defense of the existing administration.

A principal criticism of the present form of government is directed at the power of the Circuit Court judge to make appointments to the school board and to other key county officers.

Since the judge, himself, is appointed by the State Legislature, critics of the procedure contend that these major appointments are too far removed from the voters.

Under the county manager plan, most officials would be named by a manager serving at the pleasure of an elected board of supervisors. Thus, proponents of the plan say, the county's voters would be only one step away from vital appointments.

The county manager under the proposed plan also would have authority to take action on numerous other governmental issues which now require action by the supervisors. Advocates of the change contend the board of supervisors would function more efficiently in acting on "grave" county matters if its time were not taken up with "trivial" legislation.

It also was asserted at a recent hearing that under State law the county manager would have to be a trained executive capable of coping with the many administrative problems existing today.

Sponsors of the referendum also say the county manager method of electing the supervisors is more equable.

They would be chosen at large by all voters in the county. Under the present system the six supervisors are elected by the voters in their respective districts only.

At-large election of the supervisors, however, has been the principal target of those who favor the present form. They argue that organized groups in highly developed urban sections of the county could gain control of the government to the detriment of land owners in the sparsely settled agricultural areas.

Man Dies of Injuries After Leap From Car

James Chambliss, 27, of 621 21st st. ne., died yesterday in Gallinger Hospital from injuries suffered in a leap from a moving auto, police reported.

Chambliss was a passenger in the back seat of a car driven by Joseph Wase, 51, of 1520 E st. se., police said. He leaped out on North Carolina ave. se., about 5:25 a. m. An autopsy was set for noon today.

Rare, Fast-Moving Disease Fatal to 2 Children in Area

A rare, quick-moving disease killed two Washington area children yesterday.

The victims, both of whom died the day after they became ill, were identified as Shelva Frizzell, 17 months, of 6353 Waneta rd., Glen Echo Heights, Md., and Jacob Wimbish, 4, of 217 10th st. se.

Shelva, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Frizzell, died at Georgetown Hospital. After a tentative diagnosis, doctors said she had been stricken with a meningococcus blood infection known as Waterhouse-Friedrickson Syndrome.

Gallinger Hospital officials, who treated the Wimbish boy, said he, too, had the Waterhouse-Friedrickson Syndrone plus cerebral meningitis. Jacob was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Eppie Wimbish.

Doctors said the disease is a deadly meningococcus invasion which comes on very quickly and kills very quickly, particularly affecting the adrenal glands.

The course of the disease is marked by shock, coma, and bruises over the body indicating bleeding beneath the skin. Antibiotics are used to stem the disease, but because of its rapid course, there is a high rate of mortality.

Dr. C. C. Dauer, director of the Bureau of Preventable Diseases of the District Health Department, last night said meningococcus meningitis is "mildly contagious" but there is little danger of its spreading.

"It is a winter disease and the time of the year is much against any large incidence," he said.

Both hospitals are continuing laboratory tests to check their tentative diagnoses.

2 Area Men Are Drowned Over Weekend

Drownings over the long Fourth of July weekend claimed the lives of two Washington area men by last night.

Dead are John Francis Sullivan, 48, of Highland, Md., near Laurel, and Lawrence Barker, 22, of Fairfax, Va.

Young Barker drowned about 9:30 a. m. yesterday while fishing in the Shenandoah River about 5 miles north of Luray, Va., Page County Sheriff Abram Brubaker said.

Brubaker reported that Barker apparently stepped off a ledge into a deep section of the river. The body was recovered about 20 minutes later by two fishermen, D. H. Painter, 19, of 1940 Richmond hwy., Alexandria, Va., and Delmas Lazzari of Belle Vernon, Pa.

Barker was staying at the summer home of his father, Lloyd Barker, near Luray.

Young Barker also is survived by his wife, Patricia Ann, 18. Married last October, the Barkers recently purchased a home in Fairfax.

Sullivan was swimming with friends in a quarry near Waterloo, Md., when he drowned about 6:30 p. m. Saturday, State Police reported. The quarry is on the farm of Morris Nicholson, about 3 miles from Clarksville, Md.

Two Men Rescue 20-Year-Old Soldier

Two men rescued 20-year-old Pvt. Donald Henson, of Fort Devens, Mass., from the Big Seneca Creek 12 miles west of Rockville, Md., about 2:15 p. m. yesterday, Montgomery County Police reported.

Henson was swinging on a 50-foot rope over the creek with Auston Metz, 14, of Damascaus, Md., hanging on him "piggy-back" fashion.

The rope lost its swing and the two were stranded over the creek. Exhausted by the boy's weight, Henson threw him off toward shore, then fell into the creek himself, police said.

R. C. Kehnne, of 1 W. 14th st., Frederick, Md., pulled the boy ashore. Then Kehnne and W. L. Weiger, of Hunting Hill, Md., dived for Henson.

After pulling him out of the water, police said, the two men applied artificial respiration. The Gaithersburg-Washington Grove Volunteer Fire Department used a resuscitator on Henson.

Woman Hurt When Truck Runs Over Her

A Southeast Washington woman was injured critically early yesterday when she was run over by a truck driven, police said, by her husband in the 1800 block of New York ave. ne.

Mrs. Betty L. Kinser, 36, of 607 North Carolina ave. se., was in serious condition at Gallinger Hospital last night with face cuts, a possible fractured pelvis, and internal injuries.

Police said the accident was preceded by an argument between Mrs. Kinser and her husband, Horace L., also 36. Kinser was charged by the Accident Investigation Unit with operating without a District license.

Kinser told police, they said, that he was driving a truck used to pull trailers when a car came out of a side street, causing him to swerve.

His wife then fell out of the cab and was injured when the right rear wheel passed over her body, police quoted him.

They reported that shortly after midnight, they received a call for a fight at the Royal Diner, 1915 New York ave. ne., and found Mrs. Kinser fighting with two women and her husband.

The Kinsers went home in a cab. Then, Kinser told police, his wife said she wanted to return to the diner, so he borrowed the vehicle.

On the way to the diner, they argued, Kinser told officers. They stopped en route at Newbill's Service Station, 1943 New York ave. ne., where Kinser is employed as an attendant, and continued along New York ave. when the accident occurred, police reported.

The playground will be operated this summer by the Lincoln Civic Association. The Recreation Board declined to run the facility because of its location.

Restaurant Fire Causes Estimated $2000 Damage

A passerby noticed smoke coming out of the restaurant about 3 a. m. and ran a block to the Bethesda fire department, 7620 Old Georgetown rd.

Firemen said the blaze started in a trash box at the end of a counter. Gases generated by the blaze apparently blew out a window. Police estimated the damage at $2000.

Hawaii Sends Flowers And Nice Superstition To Betrothal Celebration

By Marie McNair

BY TRADITION, says Mrs. Blake Clark, an officer who marries an Hawaiian girl gets to be a general or an admiral in nothing flat. And she was looking at Beverly Farrington and her fiance, Maj. Hugh Richardson, at the time.

It was at Hawaiian Delegate and Mrs. Joseph Farrington's reception on Saturday to announce their daughter's engagement that pretty Deena Clark made the observation. She cited Lieut. Gen. Lauris Norstad, WSAF, and Lieut. Gen. Edwin W. Rawlings as notable examples.

At Mr. and Mrs. Farrington's party was Mrs. Rawlings' mother, Mrs. Caroline Peterson from Hawaii, whose artistic fingers had arranged the beautiful flowers flown in from Hawaii for the occasion. There was shell pink ginger on the piano; flame-colored antherium towering from a flat bowl; and antherium ranging through the pinks to white on the sun porch.

BUT THE MOST intriguing of them all was the carrot-colored flower curled like a shell, resting on a plaque of long, stiff 'ti' leaves in the center of the buffet table. On closer inspection, it WAS a carrot, which Mrs. Peterson had carved to make into an exotic looking blossom.

In a recent book authored by Mrs. Peterson, she has explained Hawaiian flower arrangements in detail. Island flowers are the ones she knows best, naturally enough, yet she has given American housewives suggestions and ideas through her articles in House Beautiful and Vogue.

Mrs. Peterson, who has been here several months, made her debut at the Farringtons' party on Saturday. A severe illness has kept her confined to home since her arrival. But now she's on the mend, and is leaving shortly for a visit of several weeks in New Jersey. After Beverly Farrington and Major Richardson are married, she'll start for the West Coast, and thence back to her Hawaiian home.

AS CONVERSATION eventually centered about Korea—it seems to at every gathering these days—Representative Lowell Stockman sounded an optimistic note: "It's just a bubble," he said, "Nobody's ready for a full-scale war. The world hasn't recovered from the last one."

Mrs. Robert A. Dyer was there with her daughter, Dorothy. I learned that Captain Dyer, USN (ret.), now with ECA, is viewing the fighting from a ringside seat. He's been in South Korea for the last 15 months, and at the moment is in Pusan.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Clarendon Smith entertained at dinner at the Congressional Country Club Saturday evening in honor of Representative and Mrs. Frank Boykin. Miss Polly Horton and her sister, Miss Connie Horton of New York were among the guests.

Mrs. John Elgin of Rockville has issued invitations for a bridge luncheon to be held at Normandy Farm on Saturday, July 10.

NOTE BOOK NOTES: The new Portuguese Ambassador, Esteves Fernandes, will be in New York on Thursday to meet Mme. Fernandes and their son who will arrive by boat that day from Portugal.

The Venezuelan Ambassador and Senora de Pocaterra have issued invitations to a reception from 7 to 9 p.m. on Wednesday, July 5, in celebration of their Independence Day.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. George Ives of Alexandria, on the birth of a daughter, Elizabeth Turner Ives, on June 26 at Doctors Hospital. The baby is the grandson of Senator Irving Ives of New York and of Mr. and Mrs. Turner of Norwich, N. Y.

Overweight Woman Reduces 100 Pounds, Improves Health

By Ida Jean Kain

"You can lose if you have to," one reducer promises. So if you think it's tough to have to take off 20 pounds, and doubt that you can make it, perhaps this report from a courageous reducer will spur you on . . .

She writes: "Last year I weighed 254 pounds and wore a size 52 dress. I am 5 feet, 5 inches tall, or short that is . . . oh, let's just say I was square. This year when I went back to my doctor, I weighed 154 pounds. And I now wear a size 16½. Quite a difference, isn't it?

"I am 46 years old and have six children of my own and two grandchildren I help take care of. My oldest child is in college. She had infantile paralysis and is crippled, so I take her back and forth to school every day. I wash, bake . . . even my bread, iron and take care of my house, yard and garden.

"My health is swell now. Before I dieted, I had a bad heart—but now I square dance every Saturday night and never sit one out. You can lose if you have to."

I would like to shake this woman's hand. To reduce 100 pounds takes sustained courage. But she took it in her stride right along with all the other things she had to do. My sincerest congratulations to this Hoosier reducer.

And here is a report from a woman who did her reducing under a health handicap . . .

"About two years ago I wrote you asking for your calorie chart and diet, and followed as closely as I dared. At that time I weighed 140 pounds which was too much for my short stature.

"Due to a blood disease I could not diet as a normal person would, but between the chart and the doctor I've managed to come down to 122 pounds in two years. It's been rugged going at times . . . but wonderful to be normal weight again. I'm doing my best to hold the scales at a standstill now. I think the world of my calorie chart—it's tattered from being handled so much. I hope my letter will be of some encouragement to others struggling with excess pounds."

And there is a gallant spirit too. She couldn't simply go on a diet the way most overweights can, but she did not let that stop her from getting down to her best weight. More power to her.

There is no weight problem that cannot be licked. Instead of dwelling on all the obstacles and using them as alibis, concentrate on the advantages of normal weight . . . then believe you can do, it and you can.

Child Won't Die of Breath Holding Alone

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

THERE seems to be a real difference of opinion among doctors as to the danger to a child who has the habit of breath holding. Many of them say that it is harmless and to do nothing about it. "The child will always draw its breath. It can hold it just so long and then it's bound to breathe."

It is pointed out in some medical literature that an overlarge thymus gland may cause the child to be unable to breathe when it is hurt or emotionally disturbed and that the result is a limp, pale child who seems physically exhausted after a breath-holding spell.

Mrs. E. A. A. thinks she would appreciate a column on the subject of children who cry hard and hold their breaths and pass out and even die from it. "I have been told," she writes, "that they would never die of this, but within the last couple of months I have heard of two deaths from this.

"Yesterday, I had a hard time bringing my own 19-months-old baby out of this. We thought she was dead. Please tell me is this a deficiency of some kind? She does this every time she is hurt or when she is scolded or angry. Please explain why she does this and what to do about it? She is otherwise a very sweet child, minds well and is not mischievous but very loving."

I do not think, and I believe most doctors would bear me out in this, that a child could cause death by holding its breath from temper. If a child has died because of this then there must have been some other contributing factor. In such cases it might have been an overlarge thymus gland, which sits astride the respiratory organs and by pressure could cause breath holding, which would be purely involuntary.

Just to satisfy yourself that this is not true with your child, why not have an X-ray of the thymus gland? If it is oversized then it can be reduced by a few X-ray treatments. Some doctors pooh-pooh the dangers of the thymus and presumably it is not a commonplace danger. But, the thymus gland can be overlarge, can cause raspy, harsh breathing and should be measured in the case of chronic breath-holding, with noticeable after-effects.

Jobe Says... What About Velvet Shoes and Gloves?

Recently I promised that we'd talk about velvet shoes and velvet gloves. I can't overemphasize the fact that good fashion must be based always on suitability to the occasion, to the weather, and to the wearer.

Take velvet shoes, for example; pretty and smart as these are, there's no denying the fact that velvet shoes are always too dressy to wear in the daytime at any season of the year. However, if you keep them for evening and cocktail wear only, then there's no reason why it should not be in June as well as January.

Usually the all-velvet glove is too hot for American summers. But black fabric gloves trimmed with velvet ribbons are a nice way of achieving the velvet touch.

Attorney Paul Shorb Dies of Heart Attack

Paul E. Shorb, 57, nationally known tax attorney, died early yesterday after a heart attack at his home, 4800 Woodway la. nw. He was a senior partner in the firm of Covington, Burling, Rublee, O'Brian and Shorb.

Mr. Shorb specialized in tax law from early practice, heading the firm's tax division. He was admired by his juniors as a "walking encyclopedia of tax law" and could frequently give exact quotations and citations of tax cases without reference to lawbooks.

Mr. Shorb had suffered a heart attack last December, but was considered recovered. Yesterday, however, he was stricken in the shower, staggered out, and died a few minutes later in his bed.

While attending George Washington University Law School in 1919, Mr. Shorb became a clerk in the newly founded firm of Covington & Burling, predecessor of the present firm, which has offices in the Union Trust Building, 15th and H sts. nw. The following year, he received his law degree cum laude from G. W. and was admitted to the bar. In 1921, he became a partner in the firm and continued with it until death.

Served in World War I

Born in Westminster, Md., on November 27, 1892, Mr. Shorb moved to Surrey, N. Dak., in 1900. In 1917 he received his bachelor of arts degree from the University of North Dakota and entered the service. He was a second lieutenant in the Twenty-second Infantry Division, and upon discharge came to Washington to complete his law training at George Washington.

In 1922 Mr. Shorb was married to Miss Gertrude Healy of Grand Forks, N. Dak., a University of North Dakota classmate. She survives, in addition to three children, Mrs. Dorothy Shorb Ackerman of Cambridge, Mass.; Paul E. Shorb, jr., a senior at Williams College, and Robert H. Shorb, a sophomore at Williams.

Also surviving are his sisters, Mrs. Henrietta Shorb White, 4314 36th st. nw., and Mrs. George Heger of Surrey, N. Dak., and a brother, David J. Shorb, 1400 Fairmont st. nw.

Although active in community life, Mr. Shorb is described by his associates as a man who "had a warm interest in people" and who had an "unusually wide acquaintanceship of close friends." Other interests were golf and reading.

Active in GOP

A Republican, Mr. Shorb was a member of the local Republican committee and in 1940 was a member of the executive committee and counsel of the Willkie Washington Committee.

He was a trustee of the Washington Community Chest, the Foundry Methodist Church; a member of the Finance Committee, United States Chamber of Commerce; former national president, Phi Delta Phi, national law fraternity, and a director of the Union Trust Co.

His memberships included the Chevy Chase Club, Burning Tree Club, Metropolitan Club, University Club, Phi Delta Theta, Delta Sigma Rho, American Bar Association, District Bar Association, American Judicature Society, Foreign Policy Association, Academy of Political Science and the Washington Board of Trade.

Among the honors received by him were membership in Phi Beta Kappa and in the Order of the Coif, honorary law society.

Funeral services will be held at the Washington Cathedral Wednesday at 11 a. m., followed by a private burial service in Arlington Cemetery.

Mr. Mahaffey, formerly manager of Henrico County, lived near Midlothian.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Fannie Hurst Mahaffey, his mother and a brother.

Funeral arrangements were incomplete.

Mr. Mahaffey, a native of Mahaffey, Pa., came to Virginia in 1926 as a bridge inspector for the Department of Highways. In 1932 he was named resident engineer for Fairfax, Prince William and Arlington counties. Later in the same year he became resident engineer for Petersburg.

In 1941 Mr. Mahaffey was elected to the managership of Henrico County. During his tenure in office he set up a fixed system of wages for county employes, consolidated various county offices, created two new fire departments and remodelled the county courthouse.

Women at Work

Wolf Isn't Big or Bad, After All

By Sonia Stein

"WHO'S Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf?" Not the gal who wrote the song.

As the only woman composer of background music and the only woman music director in Hollywood, Ann Ronell finds wolves are no problem in her double-barrelled career.

The men on her staff have never been difficult.

"Once they realize that a woman knows her business and is trying to do it as well as she can, they respect her," she's discovered.

Army Gave Her Its OK

IN Washington for the opening at Keith's of "Love Happy," the Marx Brothers picture for which she wrote the music, Ann looked strangely un-Washington, quite glitteringly Hollywood. But she says that when she is working at the studio, she doesn't even take time out to freshen her makeup in the middle of the day. "I let the stars look glamorous while I get my work done," she explains.

Ann is well established as a music director and composer whose song hits include "Rain on the roof," "Linda", "The Woman Behind the Man behind the Gun" and "Willow Weep for Me" which George Gershwin liked so well he asked to have it dedicated to him. But Ann's "biggest achievement" came when she was asked to write the score for "The Story of GI Joe." "It was so throughly a man's picture and yet they let me score it. I was so thrilled by that," she says.

The Army ground forces has since adopted the march from the film for its own use, so evidently Ann did the job the way men like it.

A tiny, fragile blonde, Ann is willing to tackle any assignment. Her latest, the Marx Brothers explosive farce, had its wearing moments.

"I tried to use a stop watch to time the sequences as usual, but when you are trying to compose music appropriate to somebody swallowing steam, playing Maypole with a blowtorch and a hatchet, sending a double whammy and dancing a duet as a single, you may as well give up on the stop watch," she explains.

Because she had to write a musical theme for each of the brothers — "ballet music for Harpo's facile timing and deft little dance steps, and a Russian czardas tune for Groucho's loping walk"—Ann had to study their moves in detail.

Husband Also Her Boss Now

DOES Ann's husband soothe her fevered brow when she comes home from a hard day at the office, assuring her it's not important? He does not. He's Lester Cowan, producer of the picture.

Cowan didn't hire her as a musical director until six years after they were married. Then he couldn't stand having the other studios get Ann's fine musical services any longer and made her an offer she couldn't resist.

Sometimes Ann works on the outside, too, and has just completed "Oh, Susanna", a musical which is trying its wings in little theater productions before going to Broadway, and she's at work on another.

Next move? She'd like to be the composer of the first American opera produced solely for films.

Soon Will Be Nation's Largest

THE Iwo Jima group, largest ever to be executed in bronze, is destined to become one of the country's greatest statutes. It will be erected in the center of an elaborate Marine Corps Memorial off Memorial hwy.

Rosenthal was in town as a San Francisco delegate to the American Newspaper Guild convention. Rosenthal is a native Washingtonian who left 20 years ago because he "couldn't stand the climate."

He was graduated from McKinley Tech in 1929, where he excelled in, of all things, the pole vault. The determined little guy reached a height of 10 feet 6 inches, just about twice his size then.

A brother, William (Buck) lives at 329 Delafield pl. nw.

The 39-year-old photographer is modest almost to the point of its being painful. He's practically made a career of making sure he won't be mistaken as a publicity-seeker.

Joe's the first to admit how lucky he was to get his famed photograph. "A twenty-fifth of a second either way and it wouldn't have been the picture it turned out to be," he explained.

Others Were Even Harder to Get

OF COURSE he's proud of his picture, but there are many others he considered much harder to get on his combat landings at Iwo, Hollandia, Peleliu, Anguar and Guam.

He's quietly proud, too, of the Pulitzer Prize he was awarded and the handsome bonus the Associated Press gave him.

But you get the impression Rosenthal is rather relieved that his period of being lionized intensely is over.

He still receives hundreds of autograph requests since the issuance of the Iwo Jima commemorative stamp. A philatelist himself, Joe tolerantly fills them.

He smiled, quizzically, "Well, if it makes the people happy, I don't mind doing it."

Anne's on Vacation; Back July 10

Vacation in California

Mr. and Mrs. David Bornet are vacationing in California. Mrs. Bornet will remain for several weeks after her husband returns home, and will visit in Los Angeles with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Graff.

Marines Told Them

Iwo Sculptor Meets Joe, Who Took the Picture

By Jack Walsh

PHOTOGRAPHER JOE ROSENTHAL, who shot the Marines' historic flag-raising at Iwo Jima, and Sculptor Felix G. W. de Weldon, so inspired by it he embarked on a seven-year labor to immortalize it in bronze, had a pleasant reunion here yesterday.

Fittingly, most of their time was spent in de Weldon's studio, 219 E. Randolph pl. ne. There they were dwarfed by the nearly-completed gigantic plaster model of the scene Rosenthal caught for posterity.

The two little men—de Weldon is 5-foot-6, Rosenthal a half-inch shorter—clambered up and down ladders minutely inspecting the awesome 32-foot figures.

De Weldon beamed appreciatively when Rosenthal called his work, "Magnificent."

The sculptor murmured his thanks, addng: "Without your picture, Mr. Rosenthal, this never would have been possible."

Rosenthal countered: "Without those Marines, there would have been no picture."

ACREAGE, SALE 75

MARYLAND

How to Accumulate Wealth From a Wise Selection of Acreage.

I bought Chevy Chase, D. C., about 45 years ago and built a big city there. Some of that land I bought from Mr. Glover, the deceased president of the Riggs National Bank. He bought that acreage for $70 an acre. I bought the same acreage from him at $3000 an acre. But time shows that with development of this property right in the path cheaper at $3000 an acre than he did at $70 an acre. Some of that land is now worth a million dollars an acre, and when I was developing this Chevy Chase property I got letters continuously from one man who wanted to sell me acreage in the shopping center of Bethesda. I didn't buy it because I had my hands full with Chevy Chase. The Bethesda land now is worth a million dollars an acre. Those same opportunities still exist. I own about a mile and a half front on River and Bradley rd. where they merged together overlooking Congressional Club. This is already developing into a great traffic center. Where traffic centers come, they are usually followed by a shopping center. If some developer will get a hold of this property and start a shopping center, it, too, will be worth a million dollars an acre. This entire neighborhood is ripening for a shopping center. I am building my own home there on River rd. right across from the Congressional Club. Sometimes a dozen automobiles stop on River Road to look at this home. My wife and I go out every day and we get a thrill just looking at it. I will sell all the balance of the land out there for 15c a square foot. Think of buying this land for 15c a sq. ft. and developing it while you make it worth a million dollars an acre some day as a shopping center. You can reach me at my home, WO. 0933. Fulton R. Gordon, owner. Brokers, attention.

Man About Town

The Russian Legation in New York is getting daily deliveries of huge packing cases. . . Washington is calling in its specialists on all reserve lists. . . All FBI vacations canceled . . . Janet Leigh of "Kiss Me, Kate" and its stage mgr. were married in Boston yesterday. . . The Raymond Scotts (after a long separation) have decided on Renovocaine . . . Publisher M. Cowles and his wife Fleur punctuated their debunking of the rift-rumors by taking off for So. America. . . The Mickey Cohens of Beverly Hills (and the Front Pages), whose chums had them dividing, have decided to stay in their right minds . . . Barney Ross, the ex-champ, tells Broadway pals to wager on Senor Mitri to upset champ LaMotta . . . S. Goldwyn, Jr., and Jennifer Howard, dghtr. of the late Sidney Howard, will merge any weekend . . . The John Payne-Mickey Randall hoop-dee-doodle is off. She prefers Annudder! . . . This'll give yez an idea of gambler F. Erickson's solidity: He just turned down the offer of an insurance firm for a piece of land he owns in Queens. They offered 5 mill.

From the April 16th broadcast: "Att'n, Washington Post: Please send a reporter to the Comm. of Immigration. Tell him I can document all of this: That Lajos Marschalko of Hungary swallowed Goebbels' propaganda—crook, swine and stinker . . . This Marschalko louse did everything he could to help kill Americans. He does not deserve entry into the U. S., which so many husbands, sons, brothers and fathers died to preserve!"

From the headlines over the weekend: "Hungarian Nazi Lajos Marschalko and his wife have been ordered deported by the Commissioner of Immigration."

The International Set: Hasn't King Farouk of Egypt changed his mind about merging with that reluctant girl, Narriman Sadek? He's been dating a French doll lately . . . Betty Stuart, the ex-Mrs. Bob Strong, flew to London for a weekend—just to keep her priority on Prince Kamel, Aly Khan's kin . . . The Royal medico (via our Buckingham Palace special correspondent) says Elizabeth's August blessed-event will be a son . . . Mrs. J. McAusland (Peter DeReese's ex) is furious because England's pill king (who agreed to a big settlement) hasn't paid her a single sou. . . The big scandal is that a socialite visiting the ailing Lady Mendl walked out with some of the Old Gal's gems. . . . Jean Pierre Frome wing'd to Honolulu with that familiar question for Charlotte Faye of the $$$et. . . . Deanna Durbin weds French producer Chas. David in Oct. . . . Movie magnate Wm. Fox sent Pope Pius 5 prs. of specially-made boots at $100 per pr.

Irene Dunne, filming "The Mudlark" in England, is following Queen Mary's relayed advice on how to portray Queen Victoria. She added that Victoria had a beautiful speaking voice, with hardly a trace of German accent. . . . Socialite G. Grant Carr and heiress Mary Sykes rendezwoo nightly in the Rough Rider Room . . . Cynthia Kirkpatrick (of Massachusetts society) and N. Scott Kingsley, exec. at the Herald Tribune, were sealed at City Hall Satdee. Both tribes objected . . . Horatio Luro, the glamour boy of the racetracks, has asked his wife for an abrogation. He is that mad about Winthrop Gardiner's ex-wife, Frances . . . The top feud in sports, perhaps, was the one between Jack Dempsey and Jack Kearns. Their pal, Joe Benjamin, finally got them to forget it. The Champ's career will now be filmed, with Gene Fowler writing it. . . . Dist. Atty. Hogan may add 3 more indictments in the gambling thing this week . . . The Big Burg now has exactly 8,251 pipple worth more than $100,000 and 23,099 have over 50 Gs.

Charles Heinz of the bean clan will be actress Selene Walters' next, they say . . . Didn't Mrs. Bennett Meyers, whose General went to the clink for wartime finagling, marry a local physician? . . . Mrs. Richard Greene is expected to join the Renobility in two weeks . . . Life's upcoming full page color photo of sex is called Shelley Winters . . . Potential angels for Broadway shows practically vanished, thanks to the baby stock market crash . . . "Peep Show's" big romance backstage (the one you can write about, that is) involves Rosemary Williams of the chorus and Jim Brock of the ditto. . . . Kiki Paige, the Clover Club lovely, is honeymooning with Stanley Hodes . . . David May, who plays around with department stores, thinks Joy Windsor is more fun . . . Pals of Frank Craven's son Jack and Dot Cartwright expect a wedding invite . . . Treasury agents are quietly querying old pals of Virginia Hill on her mysterious income.

Joseph P. (for Pugh?) Kamp, now in a Washington hoosegow, faces more troubles when he gets out. The Federal Court in New York just handed down a big judgment against this peculiar Patriot for unpaid printing bills . . . Barnstormers Escape Death in Midwest Tornado

This is the second in a series of six chapters in which Dick Grace tells the story of his 35 years in aviation, from the crates of prewar I to the modern jet planes of the 1950's.

By Dick Grace

CHAPTER TWO

One experience with weather I'll never forget. In my barn-storming days, every pilot had to be his own weather prophet and his forecast had better be good.

Into the cockpit I stepped to fly some 200 miles to a Midwest town to put on an exhibition. Unwillingly, my mechanic climbed in, surrounded by tools. We took off. It was a must or I would not have tried it. Black clouds hung in the background—clouds I didn't like.

They were sharply defined at their base as though cut off by a knife. No less well outlined were their uppermost peaks, but instead of black, the summits of those crags were chalky white.

My mechanic, Al Dion, and I knew it would be a test—a disagreeable one. The trail which I had to follow stretched obliquely from the bank of clouds. As the air currents were driving the masses forward I had a partial wind on my tail.

As we tried to outrun the storm, more and more rudder was needed to keep the ship on its course. The wind was rising. The mechanic turned his face to me, pointed at the clouds, now closer. He wanted to turn back and wait for better conditions. It was too late. We had been in the air an hour. With the tail wind we must have been nearing the halfway mark.

Suddenly the wind increased to such velocity that all rudder and some aileron had to be used to keep the ship on course.

Looking over my shoulder I saw the great, black rolling mass sweeping down upon us. It looked so thick and solid that I thought if it hit the ship it would tear us apart.

There were approximately 5000 feet between us and the ground. We had two alternatives. One, to stay low in the midst of the dense blackness; the other, to try to get above.

From where I sat, my best move seemed to get above though I would have to climb about 3000 feet before the storm would be under us.

Up went the nose of the ship at an angle that had us sitting well back in our seats. The motor purred encouragingly. The altimeter registered 54,-56, 5800 feet.

Then the storm struck. The oily black mass enveloped us. It was black as night. I couldn't see my mechanic in the front cockpit. It was some time before I realized that he was leaning over the cowling trying to find me. Through the darkness and the din of the motor I could hear him yelling. I was not sure but I thought I could hear the words, "We are lost if,—."

The exhausts flung out their long tongues of flames, accentuating the utter darkness of this day of night.

Still we fought skyward. Sixthree hundred. If I could only make that other 2000!

It wasn't to be. There was a loud report back of us, a blinding flash, and a roar that would have dwarfed the explosion of big war guns. Lightning had struck dangerously close, so close that the disturbed air currents sent us rolling, turning, twisting in a power tail spin. Instinctively I dived the ship.

I glanced at the luminous face of the altimeter. We had lost 800 feet.

There came a second staggering explosion. It was so violent that it seemed as if the heavens had split. It had struck much closer, for the ship was blown through the air for seconds before responding to the controls. Once more a spin, and this time, after bringing it out, I left the ship in a dive.

It was no fun being chased by lightning.

The lower strata were little better. Two thousand five hundred feet down. Still I couldn't distinguish the cockpit! We were passing through a mixture of rain and sleet. This I welcomed because I thought it must be the aftermath of the wind and lightning.

I was mistaken. The wind increased. I lifted my sleet-covered goggles in the hope of seeing something and blinked to assure myself that I had eyes. They were quite useless.

Rain fell in sheets. The flood of water drenched us, the ship, and the motor. What chance was there of living in such a maelstrom? Bad enough to be inside a house, with the hurricane-like winds, the wild lightning, the torrential rain. In an airplane there seemed not a remote possibility of survival.

Plunging Down

While I was fighting these thoughts, those white air peaks let loose. At first I thought someone must have hit me over the head with a hammer or that a section of the cowling had torn loose and struck me. That first knock was only a warning of what was to follow.

Hailstones were pelting us with the force of bullets. I gasped as I ducked my head into the cockpit.

When I had wiped my eyes enough to see the altimeter, I received another shock. We were only nine hundred feet from the ground and losing altitude steadily. The hail was tearing and puncturing the linen covering of the wings and fuselage. Soon there would be no lift at all in the water-soaked panels and we'd plunge in.

Heading the ship into the wind I threw the throttle wide open.

Again I ventured a glance at the indicator. Four hundred feet, if the altimeter was right! I tried to see over the side. Rain, Hail, Blackness.

There were different ways of bringing down a crippled ship, but this one wasn't catalogued.

Keeping the motor on full, the nose came up and in this position we waited.

It was the only way to crash—keep the motor on until we were 50 feet from the ground, then cut the switch.

The wheels dragged. They had not struck anything, yet the nose of the ship lunged forward. There was no time to look down. I yanked back on the stick, killed the motor. We hit hard and bounced viciously into the air. The wheels and tail swished through what seemed like tall grass, and motion ceased.

Still seated in the back cockpit I reached over the side and plucked a handful of green oats.

My mechanic and I crawled under the fuselage until the storm subsided. Then we crept out and looked at the ship. There were fully 200 holes in the linen—holes that penetrated both sides of the panels.

Later we heard that the storm we had weathered had been a tornado. Several lives has been lost and millions of dollars' worth of property were destroyed.

Non-Faye Type May Revolutionize Buying

By John Crosby

TELEVISION is unobtrusively staging a significant change in our merchandising practices. The changes may yet reach the status of revolution. Right now, it's just an uprising. I refer to the daytime women shoppers' programs, bursting into flower on television stations all over the country.

On these programs, a woman, usually affiliated with a department store, simply demonstrates everything from potholders to seamless brassieres for hours on end. A good deal of this is straight advertising as we know it, an appeal to come to the fifth floor of Gimbel's and buy the potholder.

But there's another twist. Just call Gimbel's. They'll mail it to you. This makes television a sort of electronic Sears-Roebuck catalogue. A small-scale experiment is now going on in Chicago to put the whole thing on a mail-order bracket or telephone bracket basis. Project that idea far enough and you could eliminate the department store entirely—the clerks, the expensive real estate—and the housewife would never have to leave her own living room except to play bridge. I don't know if this will ever happen. I just pass it along as a novel idea.

Non-Faye Emerson Type

IN New York we have two or three televised women shoppers. I pick out one, Kathi Norris, because she's been at it longer than anyone else, and also because "Quick" magazine predicts she will be one of television's most important figures in a few years, a not altogether agreeable prospect. Miss Norris is the comfy or day-time or non-Faye Emerson type personality. A house dress as opposed to a plunging neckline girl. For a solid hour over WNBT (10 a. m. Mondays through Fridays), Miss Norris beats the drums for Saks-34th Street-showing, demonstrating, expostulating on about thirty or forty different items of merchandise every day.

She's assised in this chore by her husband, a man named Sweetie. If Sweetie has any other name, I've never heard it. Sweetie's job is to hold a heavy cardboard display while Kathi explains what it contains and how much it costs and what floor you'll find it on.

The other day he was asked to model a sarong for men. It's for keeping stains off the clothing while mixing Martinis, if I understood Miss Norris correctly. A perfect Father's Day gift, guaranteed to remain unused by any father I know.

"Take your hands out of the pockets, Sweetie," said Miss Norris. "Show the handsome design. It comes in small, medium or large."

Lots of Varied Wares

HER tone toward her husband is one of affectionate indulgence, reducing the role of husband to that of Mummie's little helper. Occasionally she tries to correct his pronunciation, and here she'd better watch her step. She's sometimes wrong ("It isn't 'IM-pregnated,' honey; it's 'im-PREGnated,' just as Sweetie said first.) Once in a while, the pair engage in a little innocent love-making, pawing one another tenderly.

The merchandise runs the gamut. And what a gamut! Patio dresses. Ketchup dispensers. Satin woofie slippers (washable, $2.95). Lotion for teenage skins. (Don't fool around with it if you're in your twenties.) One-armed eggbeaters. (For housewives with hives, I except.) Pre-cooked canned hamburgers. (For husbands whose wives have run off with the chauffeur, is my theory.) A spiel goes along with each item, and, I imagine, much of it has to be memorized because it's an adman's spiel, and I don't think anyone can speak adman extemporaneously in this country.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

You Might Make It With An Airplane Motor

Harry P. Long of Culpeper, Va., is intrigued by an ad which appeared in a local (not us) newspaper recently.

It offered for rent a Virginia house which is "21 miles from Memorial Bridge. . . . Average motoring time to Washington, 10 minutes."

LIFE IS SO COMPLICATED

Mrs. J. D. Redding of 827 Rose lane, Falls Church, Va., has been studying statistics put out by one of those safety council groups.

She finds that more accidents take place in the bedroom than in any other room in the home.

The garage is the safest portion of a house, according to these figures.

So it would appear that a careful householder will stay out of the bedroom, and sleep in the garage.

But statistics go on to show that sleeping itself is very dangerous. Of all human activities, only walking causes more accidents.

The moral would appear to be that, if you want to play it safe, you've got to cut out walking, sleeping and bedrooms. Just stand upright in your garage all night.

As a compromise, you might learn to sleep on the floor, as the Japanese do, and then there'd be no danger of falling out of bed.

Groucho Marx has long maintained that the Japanese way is far superior to ours.

"An American who drinks too much," points out Groucho, "wakes up under the table. A Japanese finds himself in bed."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Two housebroken, appealing 6-week-old kittens." (Alexandria 4469.)

"Two healthy, housebroken, affectionate black cats." (Emerson 7889.)

"Black kitten." (Falls Church 1732.)

"Small 6-week-old puppy." (King 8-6651.)

"Three extra nice 8-week-old kittens." (Emerson 1833.)

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES

For about 15 years nothing much had been done to improve the Macomb st. playground.

This spring, a few irate parents banded to form the Cleveland Park Recreation Council. John Gunion of 3403 Macomb st. nw., was elected chairman.

The Council took its complaint to the Recreation Department—and got prompt action. Before long the playground sported new slides, swings, horizontal bars, teeter totters and supervisors. Everybody was happy, and the parents had a feeling of community accomplishment.

Now the mothers help in supervising the play activities of the young 'uns, and the fathers play ball with the boys and girls who are big enough to swing a bat.

When I was up that way the other evening, I spotted Robert K. Richards of 3458 Macomb st. nw. puffing around the bases.

Inasmuch as I went to school with Bob, I have a pretty good line on his age. "Hey," I said, "how come an old gaffer like you still has enough energy to play ball?"

"I'm getting in shape for our big Fourth of July whingding," he replied. "Be here at 4 o'clock and you can join us in the relay races, treasure hunt, or ball game, and maybe win a prize. Bring your own picnic lunch."

"Sounds too strenuous for me," I demurred. "Especially in this hot weather."

"Oh, that's the whole point," Bob explained. "First I work up a good thirst and then I have an excuse for going home, sitting out on our nice, cool front porch, and sipping a cold can of beer. Great stuff, this community recreation program. You can't beat it."

KID STUFF

Little Butch Lanum of 1011 8th st., Alexandria, Va., has received a postcard from his vacationing 9-year-old aunt, Lois Foust. The card reads:

"Dear Butch. Along the road we saw many dead animals including six dead skunks. We ate lunch here. Love, Lois."

MARCH OF SCIENCE

My comments about traffic that gets held up by the opening of drawbridges moves Mary Ellen to observe:

The future commuter
Will have better luck
When bridges are rigid
And boats learn to duck.

Iran Seen Threatened by Reds

By Drew Pearson

What has worried military chiefs in considering their Korean strategy is that the Soviet will next make a pass at a defenseless but vital country on the other side of Asia—Iran.

Pearson

For if the men in the Kremlin face a setback in Korea, they are likely to save face in some other area. And the most important and easiest country for them to penetrate is oil-rich, revolt-ready Iran.

Capture of Iran would put Russian forces on the Gulf of Persia overlooking the Indian Ocean and menacing both the shipping lanes to Suez and the priceless oil of Arabia.

Here are the inside facts about Iran—well known to Moscow—which make U. S. military chiefs worry.

After the Shah of Iran returned from the U. S. A., it was expected he would receive large shipments of American tanks, artillery and so forth. However, Gen. Vernon Evans, U. S. military adviser in Iran, advised against this. He warned that corruption, incipient revolt and inefficiency were such inside the Iranian army that U. S. tanks and equipment might fall into Communist hands and be used against us.

He also recommended that Iran drastically reorganize its army, that it had too many generals, not enough privates, that many high-ranking officers were so fat they could not run 100 yards, let alone stay in the field for weeks.

Ambassador Says No

Meanwhile, the Shah began to get irate against U. S. Ambassador John Wiley for vetoing a big Marshall Plan grant. Wiley was ready to O. K. a modest grant, somewhere near the ten million dollar figure, but not the large amount the Shah expected.

As a result of this and other factors, Ambassador Wiley has pretty well worn out his welcome and is being replaced by Henry Grady, U. S. envoy to Greece. Wiley is a good diplomat, but you can't say "no" consistently and continue to be popular.

Meanwhile the Iranian economic situation is not good; the Tudeh, or pro-Communist Party, is getting stronger, with the links between it and Russia reported bolder. Should the Red Army, perhaps disguised as Tudeh troops, start a march to the Gulf of Persia, the Shah's army probably could not hold out a week. Also it would be humanly impossible at this great distance, for U. S. military forces to intervene.

A Line in the Dust

At the crucial Blair House conference over Korea, following the President's return from Independence, Mo., Secretary of State Acheson made this argument for armed intervention.

"Our situation is about like two barefoot boys," he said. "One keeps jabbing and poking the other until finally the second one draws a line in the dust and says, 'you cross that line and I'll knock your block off.'

"It's time we did that with Russia," Acheson concluded.

Acheson vs. Johnson

The unfortunate backstage feud between the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of State has continued even during the tense conversations over Korea.

During the first Blair House debate over Korean intervention, Secretary Johnson abruptly brought up the question he has harped on for six months—Formosa.

"Korea is just a symbol, Mr. President," he said. "It isn't important. The really important place is Formosa."

This got no response from either Truman or Acheson, except that the President reminded his Secretary of Defense that the meeting had been called to discuss Korea.

Next day, however, before the second Blair House meeting, Johnson slipped in to see Truman ahead of the others. Using General MacArthur's argument, given during Johnson's recent trip to Japan, he told the President:

"The most strategic point in the Pacific is Formosa. It was the springboard used by the Japs to invade the Philippines, and the Communists might use it for another Philippine invasion. Our control of Formosa would completely stop a Communist invasion to the south."

Johnson's argument finally had an effect on the President, for, at the meeting which followed, he brought up Formosa himself. Acheson then agreed to the plan—later announced — by which the Seventh Fleet would prevent any Communist invasion of Formosa, but with Chiang Kai-shek also ceasing his bombing on the Chinese Communist mainland.

U. S. War Stockpiles

Thanks to the stockpiling program, the sudden Korean invasion did not catch the U. S. A. as empty-handed as Pearl Harbor.

This time the United States has enough strategic materials in its warehouses to meet an emergency—even though the stockpiling program is behind schedule.

For example, we have enough manganese on hand to keep the steel mills producing full blast for two years. This would give time to import more manganese from Africa and South America, and to explore for new manganese sources in this country. In fact, at this moment American representatives are surveying the manganese fields along the African Gold Coast.

VIRGINIA BAKER SELECTS OUR WAFFLE PIQUE DRESS AT 14.95

With volunteer drivers in acute demand by the District of Columbia Chapter of the American Red Cross, an orientation course in motor service gets under way. Volunteer drivers (trim and smart in official uniforms designed by Mainbocher) win a wrapt audience of interested recruits wherever the story of manifold Motor Service activities is told. Listening to the wonderful work of these volunteer drivers, Washington's popular Virginia Baker comes in for her share of attention, too, in her beautiful ensembles from The Hecht Co. Like so many on-the-go cosmopolites, the vivacious Virginia looks to the fashion floor of this great store in the Nation's Capital for flattering costumes for important social events.
